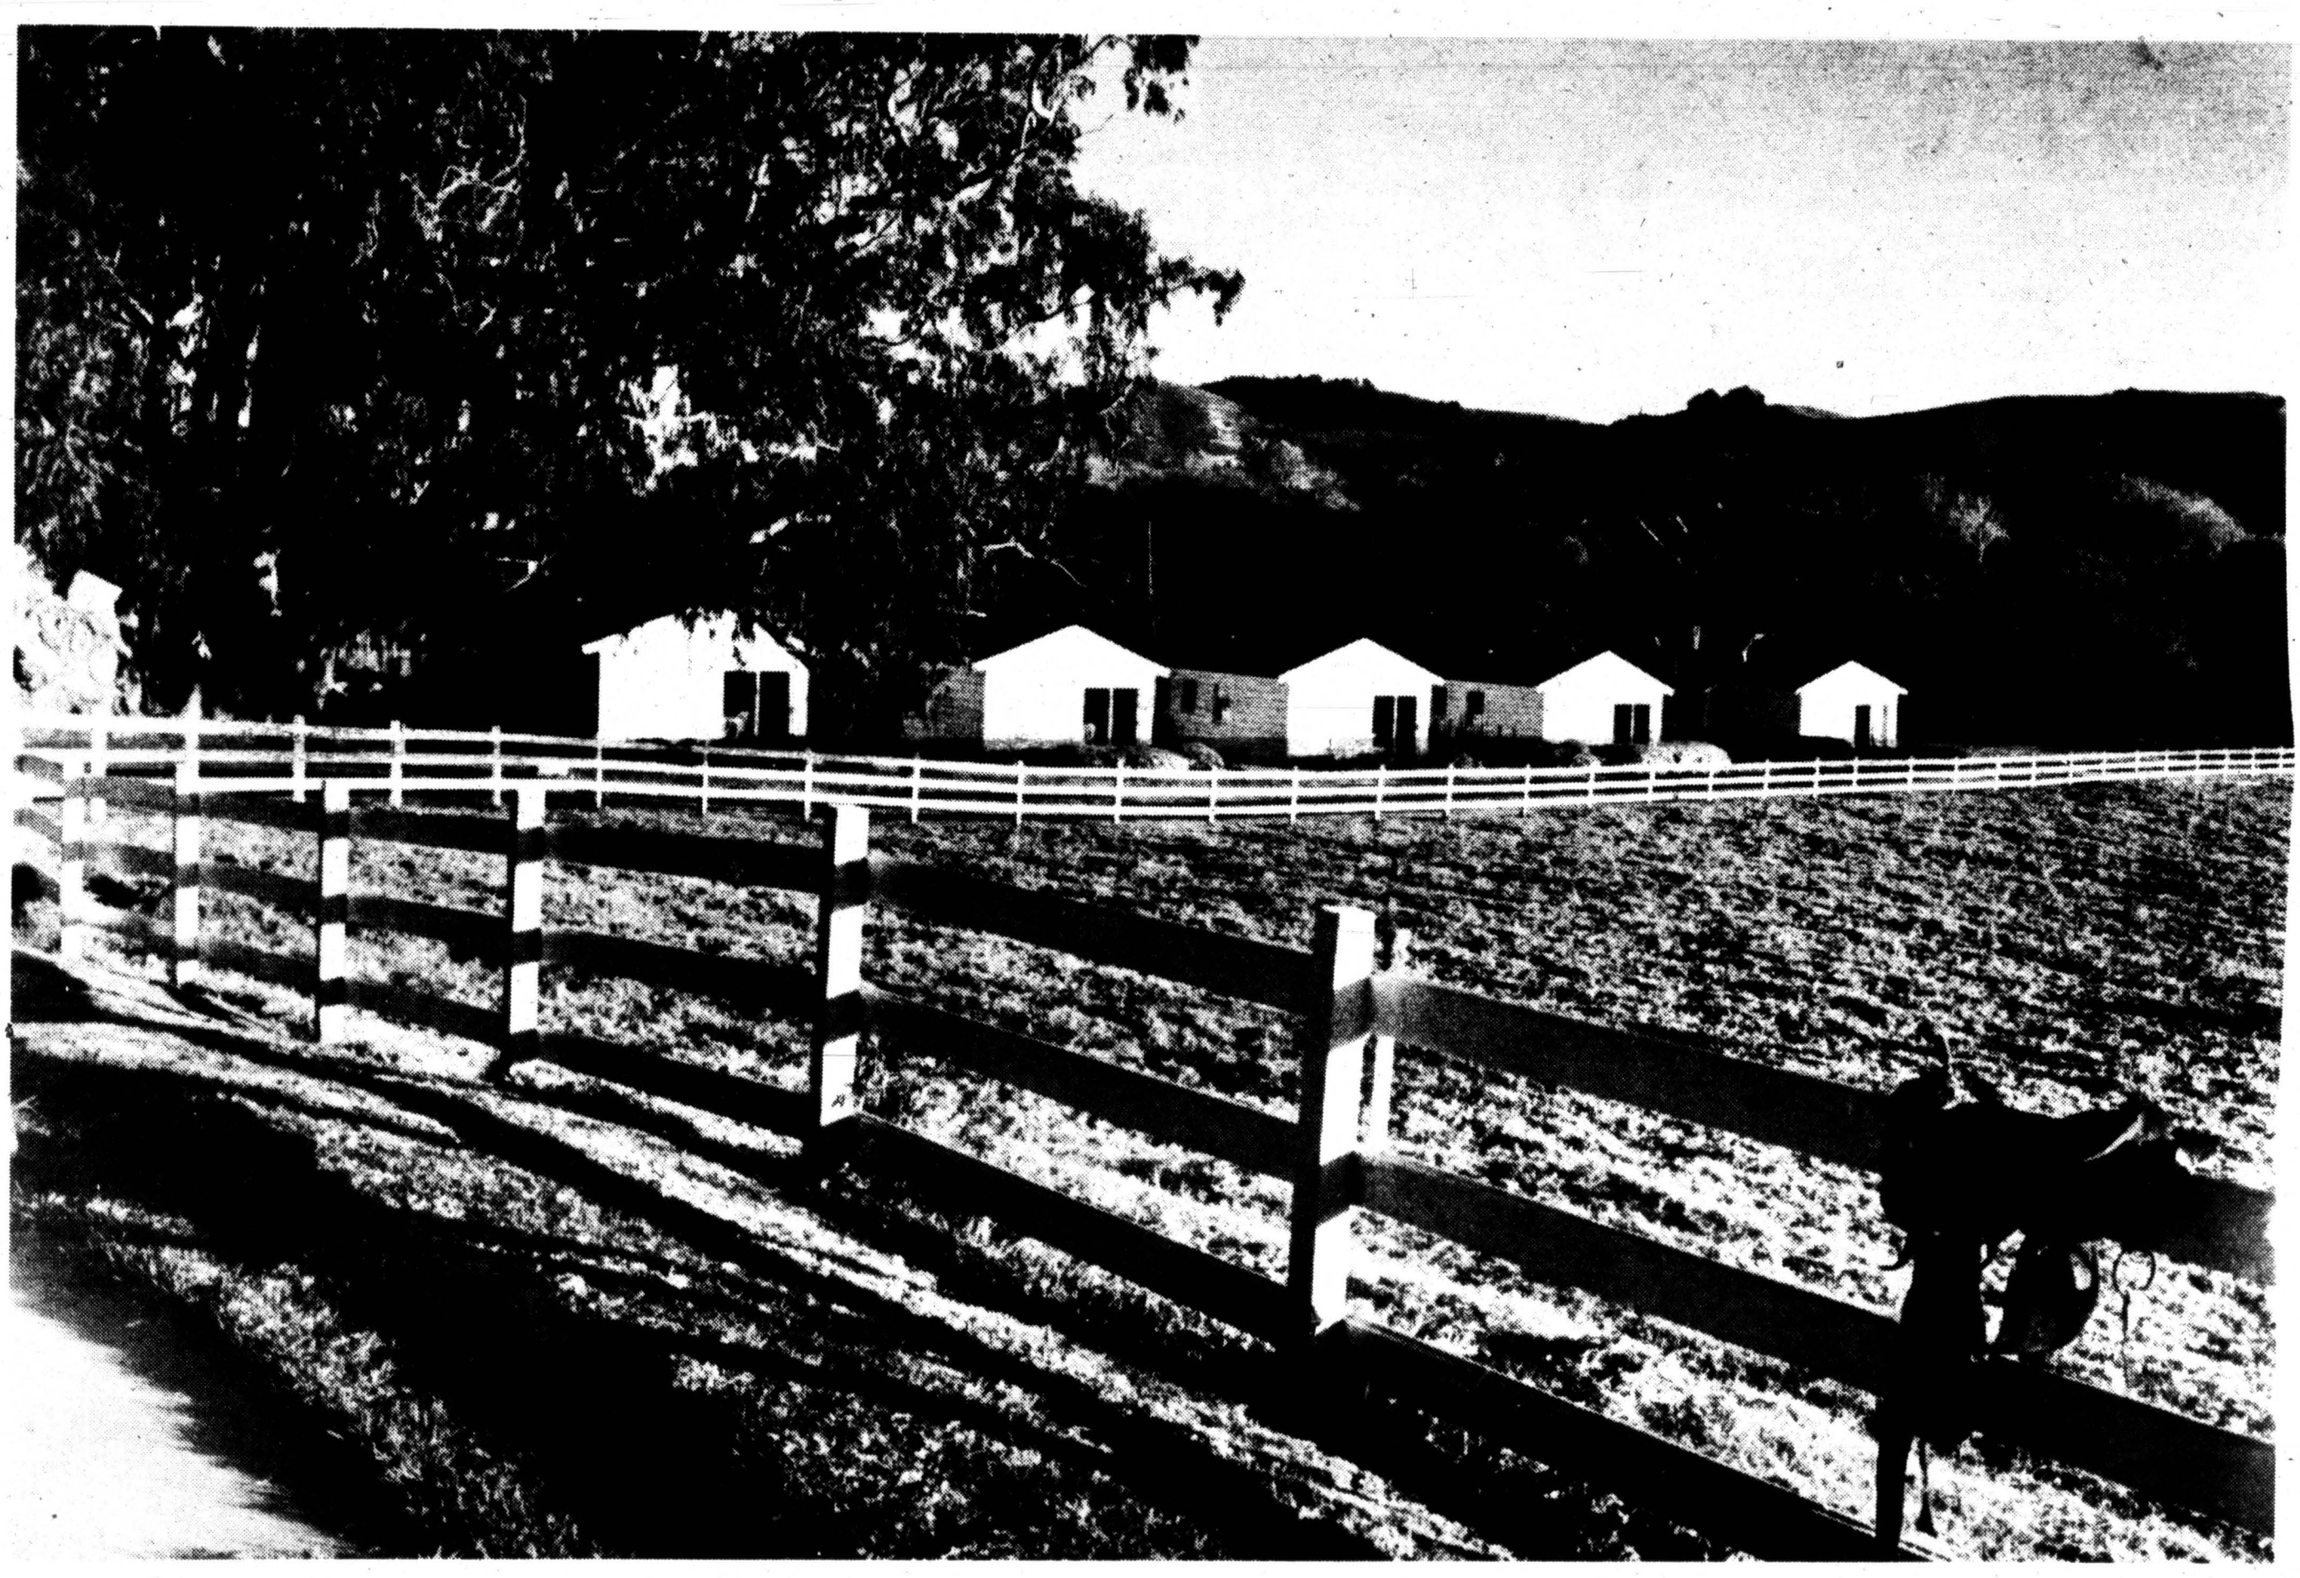
Clint buys Mission Ranch



MISSION RANCH, a former dairy farm, has bordered Carmel for more than 100 years. With the purchase of the property by Mayor Clint Eastwood, Carmelites can look forward to the scene remaining the same. This includes the cottages pictured, which offer quiet sancutary for the visitor. The Mission Ranch Corp. had proposed building 61 townhouses on the property, which would have permanently changed the appearance of the ranch. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Eastwood intends to preserve the property as it is now

By DAVID LELAND

MAYOR CLINT EASTWOOD has purchased Mission Ranch in a multi-million dollar deal with the Mission Ranch Corp., ending weeks of speculation on the fate of the property.

In buying Mission Ranch, Eastwood has been able to do for the city what it has not been able to do for itself — keep developers at bay while preserving a historic site for the community.

In an exclusive interview with the Carmel Pine Cone this week Eastwood talked of his concern for Carmel possibly losing a piece of tradition had the Mission Ranch Corp. developed the acreage.

"I think the majority of people in Carmel would like it to remain the same," said Eastwood, who first visited Mission Ranch in 1951 when in the military. "Hopefully it (Mission Ranch) can be a place where people can come back in 20 years and it will still be here."

The Mission Ranch Corp. had proposed to build 61 townhouse units on about 8.25 acres of the ranch, but had run into problems with the city and county regarding the density to be allowed and whether the developers needed an environmental impact report.

It was ruled last July that Mission Ranch did indeed need an EIR. This limited the number of buildings allowed on the property and expanded the protected wetlands, which made it less attractive to its owners.

Eastwood declined to name the price he paid for the 20-acre Mission Ranch, located just south of Carmel, but recently owners of the Mission Ranch Corp. had been asking $5.5 million for the complex.

While buying the property is a triumphant moment for Eastwood and Carmel, Doug Tuck, one of the partners in the Mission Ranch Corp., said selling the property was a sad moment.

"I feel disappointed...to not complete a project we had dreamed of. There is a real emotional letdown," he said "You become attached to the property, it kind of grows on you."

Tuck said six of the partners had wanted to live in the complex after it had been built.

As for future development of the property, which currently houses a restaurant/bar, small inn, tennis courts, cottages and a barn used for special events, Carmelites needn't worry.

Eastwood has vowed to keep the buildings and grounds just as they are, with the exception of upgrading plumbing and electrical wiring. In fact, Eastwood is attempting to stop the clock.

"Maybe the world doesn't allow you to keep things the same," he said, "but we can try."

The property, which was purchased under the umbrella of one of Eastwood's production companies, Tehama Productions Inc., is still in escrow but Eastwood said he hopes to have the deed in his hand "sometime after the first of the year."

THE JOURNEY toward the purchase of Mission Ranch began for Eastwood last spring when he was approached by Carmel Heritage, a group which works toward the preservation of Carmel.

"I talked with him before the election," said Helen Wilson, Carmel Heritage board member. "My No. 1 priority was to keep developers out."

The Carmel Heritage had previously worked with the city in its lawsuit to stop any development on Mission Ranch.

A desirable asset

Dear Editor:

As a Carmel property owner, and one who comes here frequently to do creative work, I urge by all means going ahead with the beach walkway. It is surprising to me that in a city as conscious of its real values as Carmel there should be any controversy about this desirable asset.

As to the cost, it is clearly an investment, rather than an expense. As to reducing the number of places to park cars, well, it is simply no longer the mark of a progressive community, in this day and age, to continue to defer, abjectly and unquestioningly, to the deamnds of the Almighty Auto. Like many, I enjoy walking as one of the best things to do in Carmel. The problem, currently, is that, wherever you choose to walk, 90 percent of the time you are contending with automobiles for the right of way.

A truly humane, civilized city is one that develops alternatives to the automobiles — walkways and bikeways — not one that is concerned about being able to cram the most cars per square yard into it, nor to see to it that cars have some of the most scenice parking places in California.

Let Carmel be a leader in this regard.

Christmas cheer

Dear Editor:

There is a nip in the air these mornings and the berries redden up for Christmas time. Displaced easterners may remember this season in New York City — vendors of hot roasted chestnuts on the street corners and of course, multitudes of Santa Clauses behind black Salvation Army kettles.

You won't see Santa Claus behind the kettles here this Christmas but the need remains. So if you see one of your neighbors tending a kettle throw in a little extra green; for old times' sake, and for love of your fellow man.

Crocker Library?

Dear Editor:

The use of the Crocker Bank building for the library annex is an excellent idea proposed by Tom May in the Nov. 13 issue of the Pine Cone.

Some of the advantages of purchasing the Crocker Bank Building and converting it to library use are:

1. Saving $500,000 by elimination of underground parking plan with the Pine Inn.
2. Gain 19 parking spaces at the bank and still have all of the surface parking across from the Harrison Library without building the expensive underground garage.
3. Water allocation would not increase from the prior bank use. A new annex can't be starting with the present ban on increased water use.
4. The Crocker Bank bulding, a beautiful open building that can easily be converted in less than six months for library use.
5. Water is in place, 19 parking space are available and it is situated with outstanding views overlooking Devendorf Park.
6. The space on the main floor has easy access and the additional basement will allow for excellent storage area.
7. The bank used as an annex will leave more open space on the Lincoln street lots and maintain a desirable use for the Crocker Building.

I'm not sure that the residents have had a chance to express themselves on whether there is a need for an expensive annex with a large underground garage in conjunction with a commercial enterprise like the Pine Inn. This is a good time to look at the Crocker Bank alternative with its many advantages.

Precious asset

Dear Editor:

In your report of the Beach Task Force at the last council meeting, you did not mention that I was speaking for the Carmel Beach Committee. We unanimously (and heartily) endorse the project.

This committee was formed by the city council last spring to "advise the Forestry Commission and council on the preservation, enhancement, protection, and care of Carmel Beach and Scenic Road area." Our beach is Carmel's most precious and fragile asset.

We meet on the third Thursday of the month (except this December) at 10:30 a.m. in council chambers. All Carmel residents are invited to attend these meetings.

Protect coastal waters

Dear Editor:

If you have enjoyed swimming, surfing, diving or fishing the California coastal waters, wading in coastal tidepools, jogging or cycling along the craggy California coasts, or just walking along your California beaches at sunset, you will want to write your governor now and tell him to sign Sam Farr's Assembly Bill 3804.

This bill would establish a coordinated program to legally protect our coastal waters and marine resources out to three miles by preventing offshore oil drilling, deep sea mining and the dumping of toxic wastes and sewage.

Address your scenic postcards or letters to Gov. George Deukmejian, the State Capitol, Sacramento, CA 95814.

Walkway alternative

Dear Editor:

I believe there is a way to satisfy the majority of the citizens of Carmel in regards to the beach walkway.

By striping Scenic Road walkway either with a 5-foot or 6-foot wide painting in a muted green color the full width, then paint a 4" wide stripe in white to separate the 7-foot wide area for parking of cars. This could be done in white or another color. (By doing this you would not lose any parking spaces.)

Then a solid line 4-inch wide in white or another color for the driving lane.

After a trial period of say three to six months, if it is what the citizens still want, a curbing (like the new curbs down by the Carmel Mission) could be installed to separate the walkway from the parking spaces. Weep holes would be in the curbing to let the water drain through during rainy periods.

If this method works, later the walkway could be tarred and a light layer of ground granite could be installed if the green color walkway did not prove adequate.

Signs could be put up stating the walkways were restricted to pedestrians or joggers (skate-boards and bikes prohitibited).

By doing the work this way you would satisfy the people who want to spend $750,000 to maybe twice that much before it was completed under the plan now proposed or for the other people that think that it is way too much money to spend for a walkway when that same money could be spent for other things considered to be of a higher priority nature to a greater majority of citizens.

If a strom ever comes again to wash out the street on Scenic at least you would not lose your large investment.

I believe all this work could be done for little more than $10,000.

The above should be given some consideration.

A sore thumb

Dear Editor:

In regard to Paul Laub's response to the lawsuit filed against him in which he characterizes himself as the "highest profile businessman in Carmel," (Carmel Pine Cone Dec. 4), we all might agree if it means that "he sticks out like a sore thumb."

About to be plucked

Dear Editor:

Place not your faith in tax reformers.

Instead, be reminded of a famous French monarch of another century who compared the fine art of taxing the people to that of plucking a goose.

"The object is," explained his majesty, "to get the most feathers possible with the least amount of squawking."

In the name of "tax reform," once again the American taxpayer is about to be plucked.

Theater etiquette

Dear Editor:

Wearing perfumes or colognes to a concert especially for a singing performance, just like smoking, should be forbidden. As everyone else I didn't give it any thought and wore my best perfume. My date smelled real good with his favorite cologne. The lady next to me wore something that tickled my nose membranes. Now you take the three of us alone and multiply it by all of the people in the auditorium and you'll have quite a potpourri of allergy fragrances.

I tried to suppress a sneeze, just to burst out with it loudly. Pretty soon little hacking coughs started up from all different directions. I know it was from inhaling those beautiful fragrances.

I was hoping for the artist's sake that the cloud of perfumes ould not reach the stage. Fortunately though the singer was unaffected by it all. Her voice was clear and powerful and unbelievably beautiful. Even now remembering the sounds of her voice makes me want to weep with emotion. Her quiet stage presence was alive and electrifying. What professionalism!

How lucky we were to have heard Leontyne Price in concert and lucky for us that she was not allergic to our colognes.

An early Christmas gift

CHRISTMAS CAME early for Carmel this year and the one wearing Santa's red hat is none other than that old softie Clint Eastwood.

Clint, after months of negotiation, has purchased Mission Ranch from its owners and intends to keep it just the way it is, which is exactly the way most Carmel residents want it. Plans for a 62-unit townhouse development have gone down the tubes with the sale. Did I just hear a massive sigh of relief?

Granted the property is owned by Eastwood — not the city — but he may as well have gift wrapped it and put a big red bow around it because his ownership means that the historic property will keep its rustic charm and beauty and its unparalleled views as long as he has anything to do with it.

Eastwood has achieved something that — without exaggeration — may be of historic proportions and may be the most significant boon ever for Carmel and its residents. Last year the city initiated a campaign to raise funds to buy the ranch, but at the rate it was going development would have been an inevitable conclusion.

Even Helen Wilson, a longtime Carmel resident and member of Carmel Heritage, was clearly impressed, even dumbfounded. "I'm still reeling with ecstasy," she said. "I've never seen anything like it before."

Eastwood said he plans to work with members of Carmel Heritage to find out how best to utilize this important property as a true asset, something the community can be proud of. It behooves all of us to give all the support we can to the effort.

There may still be a few Scrooges and skeptics out there who doubt his motives, but we believe Carmel owes a huge debt of gratitude to Clint Eastwood, mayor and a true citizen of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Odello property excluded from CV master plan

By DAVID LELAND

THE CARMEL Valley Master Plan is headed for approval next week by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors — sans the controversial Odello property.

The board is scheduled to conduct its final hearing on the plan at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 16, in the courthouse in Salinas.

But on Tuesday, Dec. 9, the board sat for three hours discussing recommendations from the county planning staff concerning nagging problems which have plagued the document.

While the Odello property, located south of the Carmel River and east of Highway 1, has never been included in the master plan, Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman had argued that it would serve the county to have it included.

The Odellos have fought and lobbied for exclusion from the master plan, insisting they are already limited by other governmental agencies.

The Odellos plan to build a 162-unit residential complex, restaurant and farmer's market on the 134-acre artichoke farm.

Last month the county planning commission in a 5-3 vote excluded the Odellos from the plan. But at Tuesday's meeting the county staff recommended to the board that the property be left in the plan's sphere, but not subject to the yearly allocation of the buildout.

Supervisors Marc Del Piero, Dusan Petrovic and Barbara Shipnuck disagreed with that recommendation and voted for exclusion of the property. The three supervisors voted the same on this issue in 1984. Strasser Kauffman and Supervisor Sam Karas voted to keep it in the plan.

"I would find it difficult to justify including them in the master plan and not treating them like everybody else," Shipnuck said. Shipnuck also questioned whether they should be in the plan because any traffic impact they may have would not affect Carmel Valley Road, but instead, would impact Highway 1.

THE ODELLO East artichoke fields — which have been the center of controversy in hearings on the Carmel Valley Master Plan — was excluded from the plan on a 3-2 vote of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors Dec. 9. The view is from Highway 1 south of Carmel River.

But supervisors Kauffman and Karas remained adamant in their beliefs on the Odello property.

"The moment we allowed The Crossroads (shopping center) to go in, the Odellos became part of the property," said Karas, referring to the Odellos close proximity to the shopping center at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Strasser Kauffman agreed.

"There is no rational justification for separating the Odello land from the rest of the plan," she said. "The Odellos have a significant impact on the rest of the valley."

Strasser Kauffman said that if the Odellos go ahead with their building plans it will constitute one-tenth of the total buildout of the valley

Strasser Kauffman further questioned how the county will be able to proceed with its flood mitigation plans, which include lowering the existing levee on the Odello property to inundate about 90 acres of that land with water from Carmel River.

"We can do the flood control project with or without the Odellos," she said at Tuesday's meeting. But by Wednesday morning the supervisor sounded less militant.

"If all goes well we will urge the Odellos to discuss details of the flood project with the county," she said.

After the board had excluded the Odellos from the plan 3-2, it unanimously approved subtracting the 162 units from the total 20-year buildout.

But for Bruna Odello, matriarch of the Odello family, the victory has been tarnished by the more than 20 years of battle with the county.

"I'm pleased and I thank God," she said calmly. "But to jump up and down on the roof, no. I'm almost totally burned out."

IN ORDER for the supervisors to be able to approve the plan next week, the planning staff must organize 60 pages of "findings" which would support the final approval of the plan.

These findings must then be written up by J.R. Ramos, deputy county counsel. Ramos will present the final draft of the master plan to Superior Court Judge Richard Silver upon its adoption.

Silver has twice invalidated the master plan because of its shortcomings and has the final vote of approval.

In other considerations the board:

- Agreed all development which requires a water supply will be subject to county water allocation.
- Deleted Canada de la Segunda from the master plan. County planners had said the valley did not need such an artery to feed traffic into the area.
- Agreed that 900 additional residential units can be built during the 20 years of the plan. That is in addition to about 572 existing lots of record.

Planners ask developer to lessen impact of apartments

By NANCY HILLS

OCEAN AVENUE ambiance was a focus of concern when the Carmel Planning Commission continued an application for second-story apartments over Dansk and Hanson Gallery building.

The commission continued property owner Ted Leidig's application for a second-story addition on the northwest corner of San Carlos Street and Ocean Avenue until Dec. 17. The commissioners asked Architect Michael Minnemeyer to submit revised plans which would minimize the impact of the upstairs apartments.

The commissioners also denied an application for a broker-style gallery on Lincoln Street, approved Jack Hakim's use permit application to divide Carmel Vintage Shoppe, approved a gift shop use permit and denied an application for a dry cleaners on Lincoln Street.

The Leidig application sparked debate among the commissioners about the character of Ocean Avenue if second-story additions are allowed to proliferate. Creating a "canyon" was how one commissioner described the possible result of allowing continual second-story additions.

Staff Planner Brian Roseth explained to the commission that the building, which runs the entire block from Ocean to Sixth avenues, is classified as "non-conforming" because it violates current lot coverage codes and standards. It is a common problem for older commercial buildings, Roseth said.

The building covers 98 percent of the lot while the code allows only 80 percent, with some leeway for residential building.

Adding a second story would increase its non-compliance with present law, Roseth explained, and outlined three possible solutions for the commissioners to consider.

- Increase the landscaping area on the second story. The landscaped area would count toward reducing the lot coverage and "transfer" the required setbacks upstairs.
- Increase the landscaped area on the first floor, which would require changing exterior walls. A proposal Roseth characterized as "somewhat Draconian."
- Change the code to allow for greater lot coverage in commercial buildings.

The building also does not meet current parking standards since it has not provided any spaces, however, the addition of residences does not require any additional parking under current ordinances.

Roseth said he warned Leidig the application would probably be problematic because of the non-conformities.

AN APPLICATION for a second-story addition to the Dansk and Hanson Gallery building on the northwest corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street prompted the Carmel Planning Commission to discuss the future look of Carmel's main street. The application, made by property owner Ted Leidig, was continued until the commission's Wednesday, Dec. 17 meeting. (Holly McFarland photo.)

THE LAST option, change the code, did not sit well with all the commissioners.

"My response to a change in the code is that we will have a whole string of two-story buildings all the way down Ocean Avenue. It'll be wall-to-wall walls. Downtown was not meant to — and was never meant to — have wall-to-wall second stories," said Commissioner Bruce Roberts.

Chairman Ken White said he was concerned enough about the look of the town to suggest that it should be decided by a vote of the residents.

"I am bothered by this application and those to follow," Chairman Ken White said. "We're talking about the skyline of the business district, not just one more corner. What's it (the business district) going to look like in 10 or 20 years from now if we get more applications?"

White added he believed that approximately 50 percent of the commercial area was subject to two-story additions — and some of those buildings are "Carmel architecture."

White suggesed a referendum on second stories on Ocean Avenue might be the best way to handle the decision.

"If we felt strongly enough and concerned about another building on Dolores Street to hold a referendum (on Piccadilly Park), I believe the people should have some input into this," White said.

Commissioner Carla Ramsey said she was "also worried about light and its effect on pedestrians" if the entire street was made two-story. She added later in the meeting she was also concerned about "trading off" lot coverage and asked rhetorically, "Where does that stop?"

Commissioner Olof Dahlstrand said "about 10 years ago, the idea of living quarters in the business section seemed a good idea." Lot coverage standards were intended for new construction and existing buildings were not "really addressed" by the code, he added.

Leidig, however, responded to the commission's concerns by saying that the building has been there since 1903 or 1905. Its present size was brought before the planning commission, and now the Leidig have had to live with those decisions.

According to present codes, Leidig said, there can be second-story apartments.

"We will tear the building down (and rebuild it to current standards) if that is what the commission wants," Leidig said.

The commissioners responded that they didn't want to encourage tearing buildings down to meet the code.

Roberts made a motion to deny the application, but did not receive a second. A second motion made by Hicks to require setbacks on the second story that would ameliorate the non-conformity issue and reduce the impact of the apartments was approved 5-2 with Roberts and White casting the negative votes.

In a later interview with The Carmel Pine Cone, Leidig said he felt the laws should be consistent.

"The general plan wants apartments in the commercial district and the city gives incentives to encourage those, such as no-parking requirements and a laxer density," he said. "On the other hand, the law says you cannot increase the 'intensity of a non-conforming building.' All the buildings in Carmel commercial district are non-conforming."

He added "has anyone said anything about the 100 apartments houses in the R-4 district — is that all right?"

Leidig said he would continue to work with the city to develop a project within the codes.

ART GALLERIES also became a subject of debate for the commission.

The commissioners denied a broker-type art gallery in a location on Lincoln Street that was not previously occupied by an art gallery.

Carol and Ira Pomeroy applied to move their gallery, currently located in Cypress, into the former location of the House of Sweden on Lincoln Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

Carol Pomeroy told the commission she

Eastood buys Mission Ranch, will preserve it

After hearing the Carmel Heritage suggestion, Eastwood began a sales campaign to bring in outside investors to help him buy the property. He found, however, that nobody wanted to buy into a project which would not yield immediate financial results.

Eastwood told potential buyers that he planned to keep Mission Ranch operating in the same manner — without any further development.

"It's not what an investment counselor would say to fly into," Eastwood said. But the more he pitched Mission Ranch the more interested he became in its purchase.

"The more I sold everybody else, the more I decided I'll do it," he said. "Since my interest in the community is more than an outsider, it became practical for me to do it."

Eastwood made Tuck and the Mission Ranch Corp. an offer after the election.

"We had other people very definitely interested in the property, but they were interested in a development point of view," Tuck said. Tuck called Eastwood's offer an "altruistic" one.

"We had never dealt with anyone who was more of a gentleman, more sincere, more easier to get along with than the mayor," Tuck said.

Once the deal is complete, Eastwood said he will look to the Carmel Heritage board for direction and best utilization of the property for Carmel.

Carmel Heritage describes itself as a "non-political" group dedicated to preserving the village's past.

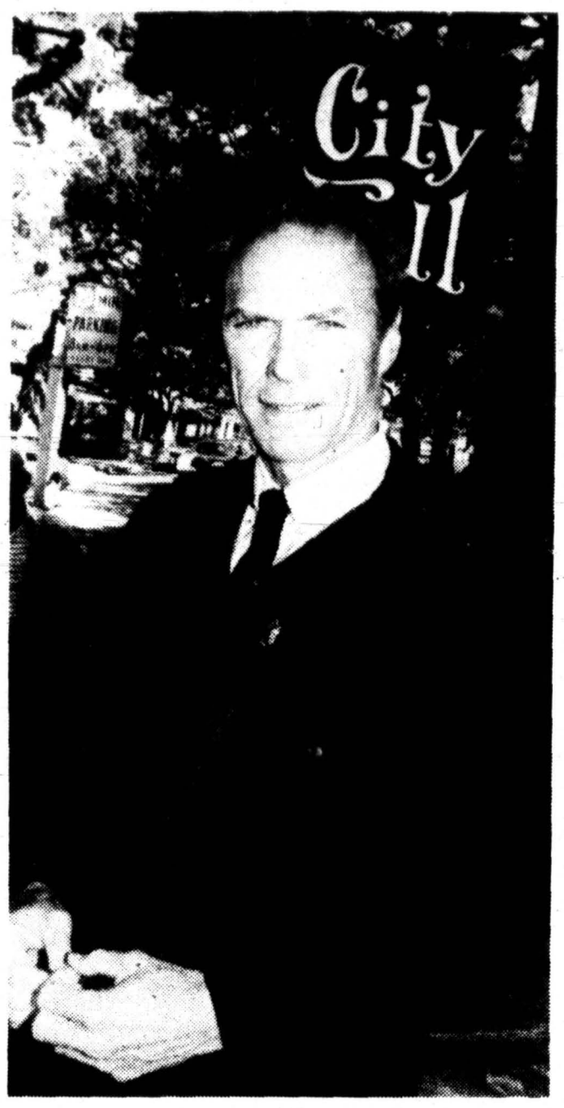
Formed in 1984, the group's first undertaking was to develop an oral history of Carmel and its residents based on recollections of many if its oldtimers.

Carmel Heritage also would like to institute a spring garden tour and open a small foundation building where people could come and learn about the city.

Eastwood suggested to the Carmel Pine Cone that Mission Ranch may be a possible site for senior citizen activities, while Wilson suggested a museum where the bunkhouse now sits.

But for now Wilson said Carmel Heritage is content just to know there will not be any development on the Mission Ranch.

"I can't foresee any dramatic change," Wilson said. "We're still reeling from the ecstasy of obtaining it. The big push is over."



CARMEL MAYOR Clint Eastwood has taken it upon himself to preserve Mission Ranch for the city. The deal, which will be complete "sometime after the first of the year" reportedly is worth more than $5 million. Eastwood said Mission Ranch will remain the same in its appearance and operation. (Holly McFarland photo.)

WHILE EASTWOOD bought the property to maintain a status quo, he has not ruled out annexing it to the city sometime in the future.

The city had expressed interest in buying the Mission Ranch and even made an offer of $3.75 million to its owners, which was turned down because it was too low.

"That's another step. We have to analyze it." Eastwood said. "I don't know if the city wants to be in the real estate business."

Eastwood said it may be a risking the taxpayers' money if the city attempts to operate a business at their expense.

But it became apparent to the Mission Ranch Corp. that Eastwood clearly represented the wants and needs of Carmel.

"The sentiment in Carmel seemed to be pretty loud and clear," Tuck said. "They wanted to retain Mission Ranch as it is, basically."

For present Eastwood seems content with the way the million-dollar deal has progressed. He believes the city has come out on top whether it actually owns the Mission Ranch or merely has access to its features.

"If private ownership can keep it the same for the taxpayer, I would imagine it would meet with approval," he said. "There's no downside."

Meals on Wheels needs drivers

DRIVERS ARE desperately needed to deliver 200 meals daily to shut-ins and the handicapped on the peninsula for Meals on Wheels.

According to Chuck Poland, a Carmel volunteer, 200 homes are served with three meals five days a week from Carmel Valley to Marina, but 22 volunteer drivers are needed to deliver those meals.

"We were seven drivers short the other day," said Poland, who has been pressed into service so often that he's driving almost daily now. "It means a lot to these people. You thank your lucky stars when you leave."

Poland, who even took to delivering meals only days after he had surgery because of the shortage, said there are 22 routes, three of them in the Carmel area. One route usually takes from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. (including driving to and from the pick-up point in New Monterey).

Each shut-in is delivered a breakfast, one cold meal (usually sandwich, salad and juice), and one hot meal. He added that volunteers are also needed to make sandwiches and salads at the Meals On Wheels kitchen in New Monterey.

Amost all of the help is from volunteers, Poland said, so often the agency ends up shorthanded. If you would like to volunteer to help out contact Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

Meals on Wheels is a non-profit organization now going on its 15th year.

Public works dept. joins in on Christmas spirit

18THE CARMEL Public Works Department has two projects it is pursuing to spread some Christmas joy to Carmelites: free Christmas boughs and Christmas tree seedlings.

The boughs, which are trimmings from local trees, are available at the Sunset Center parking lot at 10th Avenue and San Carlos Street. The trimmings will be restocked until Christmas and are free to the public.

Also, from 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday, Dec. 20, the Carmel Forestry Commission will be having its 20th annual tree giveaway.

The giveaway will take place in the U.S. Post Office parking lot at the corner of Fifth Avenue and San Carlos Street.

A personal history of Mission Ranch property

(Editor's Note: This article was first published in April 1986 and was written by Carmel resident Helen Wilson, a member of Carmel Heritage, which has been fighting to preserve Mission Ranch for the past several years. It has been edited slightly for length.)

By HELEN WILSON

THE MISSION Ranch property in Carmel, with one of the most spectacular views on the peninsula if not the world, is a much-talked about and much sought-after piece of real estate.

So how about this little-known historical fact: The first time the property sold, the selling price was $300. That's right, $300 for 160 acres.

This then is a short, rather personal, history of the Mission Ranch. The story begins in 1852.

ALL RECORDED history, of course, is part fact, part fiction, and with a touch of legend thrown in, and in the end you have to decide which is which. But it is a fact that an Indian named Juan Romero did deed the ranch land — including what is now Mission Ranch — to William Curtis, a Monterey storekeeper in 1852.

In part the deed read in Spanish: "I, Juan Romero, deed to William Curtis about 160 acres, more or less, for $300. The deed was signed with an "X" and beneath the "X" his name was written by someone else.

This land encompassed the Carmel Mission, the old pear orchard which is now the Carmel Youth Baseball park, a house directly below the mission, land up to Santa Lucia Avenue, half of the Carmel Point area and across the Carmel River to land bordering today's Odello artichoke fields.

THE MARTIN home at Mission Ranch, now being used as a bed and breakfast inn, was in the Martin family for more than 60 years, from 1860 until 1926 when it was sold to Willis Walker, a San Francisco lumber baron. (Sharon Wilson Bates photo, courtesy of Jean Draper.)

Between the years 1833 and 1840, lands surrounding all of the California missions were parceled out to the padres and political favorites by the Mexican government. The padres must have thought highly of Juan Romero — perhaps he was an alcalde (mayor) or a juz de paz (justice of peace) of the Indian village adjacent to the mission. We can be sure he was a very good Catholic and though he was illiterate he was well rewarded by the padres.

YEARS LATER, silver was found on the property and shortly after that the legend of "The Lost Silver Mine of the Padres" was born. Eventually a mine was found. But it seems more reaslistic to believe that the legend was a result of frigates dumping low-grade silver ore overboard when they arrived at the mouth of Carmel River.

These frigates, coming from Argentina, used the ore as ballast and when they arrived it was thrown overboard to lighten the load so that a cargo of tallow and hides could be taken on board and returned to South America. Over the years bits of this ore washed in by sea and up the Carmel River to what is now the Mission Ranch property.

Another legend deals with a tunnel that connected the ranch with the mission. It has been said it was one of the hideouts of the notorious outlaw Joaquin Murietta when he had reportedly stolen gold from the Mother Lode country during the Gold Rush days.

It has also been said the padres built the tunnel in case of Indian uprisings, or perhaps they hid their ceremonial vessels in it to prevent theft.

This last conjecture seems most unlikely as their original safe reposes in the mission today and it seems more likely that is where the padres stored their valuables rather than in a tunnel. But the rumors persist.

THE SECOND and third deposition of the property occurred when Curtis sold it to one of his clerks, a Mr. Loveland, in 1856, and in 1860 when Loveland, in turn, sold it to a John Martin.

Martin was married to a young Scottish widow with three sons. This union brought forth five more sons and a daughter, Isabel. It is from Isabel's daughter, Jean Draper, who still lives in Carmel, that we learn about those days on the ranch. The Martins owned and operated the ranch for 60 years. John Martin, who had earlier lost property in Carmel Valley because it was improperly recorded, had the Mission Ranch property recorded by the U.S. government in 1874, and the seal of the general land office was signed by President Ulysses S. Grant.

As the family grew, a one-story house was raised and another floor added underneath. How this was engineered is a question; though with eight strong boys, miracles are always possible. The gracious old house still stands today, used as a bed and breakfast inn.

Supervisors to consider extending time for PB gate

By DAVID LELAND

FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman fears the Pebble Beach Co. is putting the cart before the horse in applying for a final map for its Spanish Bay resort project. She believes that traffic considerations must first be addressed.

The board of supervisors will consider an amendment to the Del Monte Area Land Use Plan which allows additional time for construction of a new gate in the Gowen Cypress area of Pebble Beach at its meeting next week.

The board is scheduled to hear arguments pro and con regarding the proposed amendment at 2 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 16, in the supervisors chambers in the Salinas courthouse.

The Pebble Beach Co. in receiving its land use permit was required to build a gate on Haul Road, which intersects Highway 68. This is not only to accomodate increased traffic from the Spanish Bay project, but would also meet the eventual buildout of the Del Monte Forest.

Upon completion the Spanish Bay project, a 270-room hotel, 18-hole golf course and condominium project, would increase traffic by about 100 trips a day, according to Pebble Beach Co. spokesperson Candy Ingram.

The total buildout for the Del Monte Forest area for the next 30 years stands at 1,076 new residential units and 270 visitor accomodations.

The board of supervisors added the new gate onto the Spanish Bay project's building permit because it was the first major development in the Del Monte Forest, Strasser Kauffman said. It is for this reason that the traffic conditions must be addressed before the project is done.

"Even if Spanish Bay doesn't have too much traffic there might be more traffic eventually," Strasser Kauffman said.

The Pebble Beach Co. is asking for a three-year grace period to study traffic patterns in the area and come up with the best solution.

But Strasser Kauffman said this may leave the forest in danger of inadequate roads to handle the increased usage, and by that time it would be too late to demand the Pebble Beach Co. build a new gate.

"Traffic for Spanish Bay addresses the whole subdivision," she said. Strasser Kauffman questioned what would happen if the Spanish Bay project were sold after completion and the new owners declined to make good on the new gate.

While Strasser Kauffman remains vehement about traffic patterns being addressed, she said she is flexible.

One option she suggested would be the Pebble Beach Co. posting a bond for the construction of the new gate, which could cost about $2.5 million (for a overpass-underpass-type interchange). This would enable the county to act on its own accord in assessing the need for an additional entrance to Del Monte Forest.

"We need some guarantees traffic will be addressed," she said.

Three weeks ago Strasser Kauffman was the only "no" vote on a measure which allowed the Pebble Beach Co. to begin work on its condominium project without allowing for traffic mitigations.

Strasser Kauffman said the condominiums were supposed to be the last phase of the project after the hotel and golf course were in operation. Both of these are still under construction.

"These people need to understand that the county doesn't operate this way," she said.

History of Mission Ranch goes back to the 1850s

When the Martins lived on the ranch it was a dairy farm. The present restaurant was the original creamery and the barn next to it was just that, a barn for cows. (What a view those cows had!) The smaller building across from the main house was used as a bunkhouse. At that time, the Carmel River ran all year on both sides of an island which was about two to two-and-a-half miles long. There the family farmed potatoes. The ranch abounded with wildlife and occasionally a grizzly bear would be found sleeping in a haystack.

The Martin children attended Bay School near Point Lobos, which meant crossing the river; when winter floods came that was impossible. At lower tides the children crossed in front of their property and often Isabel, wearing the long and voluminous skirts of that era, would scoop up a salmon and bring it home for dinner.

Later, even though she had eight brothers, it was up to Isabel to go out and catch her horse and hitch it to a buggy for the trip over the hill to the high school in Monterey. She proudly told her daughter that she never missed a day of school, nor was she ever tardy in all of the four years.

LIFE AT the ranch sounded wonderful. Fishing in the Carmel River was bountiful. Life was full and good and the Martins prospered. There was one problem. John Martin had an itch.

Martin, like lot of others, had the gold bug and he was forever digging up the ranch looking for gold. And it wasn't just the ranch that fell beneath Martin's shovel. Martin was all over the area. Some of his gold searching trips took him up the valley as far as Tassajara. Mrs. Draper says she doesn't believe he ever found any gold, but had fun trying and trying and trying.

Martin deeded some of the property to the mission so they would have access to the front of the church. Originally, all the land surrounding the mission was owned by Martin.

Martin, always hopeful and always in search of "precious metal," dug a 60-foot shaft into the silver mine on the property. However, when the ore was analyzed it was found to be a very poor grade. Even this failed to dispel completely the legend of "The Lost Silver Mine of the Padres."

When he died, Martin left the ranch to his children. His son, Andrew Stewart, continued to operate the property as a dairy and farm for years.

In 1926, the family sold the ranch to Willis Walker, a lumber baron and prominent San Francisco socialite. Walker, who wasn't into farming, turned the ranch into a private riding and recreation club. In fact the largest of the barns on the property today was built as a stable for Muriel Vanderbilt Phelps' fine riding horses.

This connection lasted only a short time and again John Martin's constant quest for gold becomes part of the story. The highly valued horses were continually stumbling and falling into pits and shafts dug by Martin. Mrs. Phelps moved her stables up the valley and onto surer grounds.

The ranch — with shafts and pits filled in — continued as a club. Today private homes (Walker Tract) are built on top of the mine. The largest of the barns was used for badminton courts and ping-pong. A swimming pool was contructed south of the creamery, which now houses the restaurant/bar. A Mr. McFadden, manager of the club, reportedly often rode his horse into the barn and shot up the place. Just another colorful footnote to the history of Mission Ranch.

IN 1940 the Bert Dienelts bought the ranch from Walker's estate. By now much of the property had been sold off and the tract of land had shrunk to about 100 acres. Also the whole place was in a state of disrepair. The selling price this time: $40,000.

After refurbishing the property, the Dienelts opened the club to the public. Then when World War II came, it was turned into an officer's club, but anyone, civilian and military alike, could get a year's membership for just $1 a year. they sold about 20,000 memberships.

The Dienelts owned and operated the property for about 40 years, with Skip Heebner, Mrs. Dienelts' son by a previous marriage, as manager. This is the period best known to today's peninsulans. It was the place to go for conviviality, its piano bar and food prepared by Chef Sylvester, who also became a local legend. It should be noted that at the time a prime rib or steak sandwich sold for $1.50. (Those were the days.)

Heebner has many tales to tell about those days. Many famous and not a few infamous people found their way to this meeting place. One night, according to Heebner, Frank Sinatra and Robert Mitchum were toasting themselves — both inside and out — in front of the restuarant's fireplace, when a local wandered in and saw his idol, Sinatra. The local — he might have possibly been toasting himself as well — approached the singer and, for reasons long lost, Sinatra arose, popped the local on the jaw and decked him. The local, for some reason excited by his "contact" with Sinatra, left the restaurant, got into his car and proceeded to ram it into a cypress tree, demolishing his automobile. These are referred to by many as "the good old days."

Another problem that occurred during the "Swinging Years," according to Heebner was locking people in the place at closing time.

"It happened more than once," he admits. "I was always locking people up in the place. One time I locked in a man who could not find his way out. So he just curled up in a booth and went to sleep. The next morning the janitor came to work while it was still dark. He reached over to turn on the light and found this 'body.' The janitor passed out, and when I arrived there were two bodies side by side."

Some of the Navy's Blue Angels, stationed at the Naval Postgraduate School in the mid-1960s, became regulars at the Mission Ranch. On a photograph of themselves given to Heebner is the inscription: "To the swingingest place in California." And for many it was.

NO MENTION of the Mission Ranch during this period would be complete without mentioning Kay Holman who has, and still does, play at the piano bar. She's become another "legend."

Tennis champion Helen Wills Moody played on the tennis courts, movie stars and entertainers from Jean Arthur, Joan Baez, Doris Day and others too numerous to mention, have patronized the ranch restuarant for years.

When asked about the legend of "ghosts" at the ranch, Heebner admits he's baffled.

"I don't know," he says. "But many people have reported seeing the ghost of Joaquin Murietta. Also people have frequently seen the ghost of a woman dressed in an old-fashioned white gown in the bunkhouse."

At the end of the Dienelts' years at Mission Ranch, the property had been reduced to 20 acres by eminent domain, the state had acquired the land and the lagoon rights down to the beach. The property where River School now is was bought by the Carmel school district. They sold the four acres south of the mission for the youth baseball park for a token amount and the adjacent property, which the estate of Max Hodges owns, was traded for a race horse and another token payment. The sewage disposal plant took over the property's original island and land surrounding it. The Dienelts also gave the church four acres around the mission.

So now the original grant to Juan Romero is down to about 20 or 21 acres, which the Dienelts sold for $3 million.

Today, while many things have changed, one things remains the same at the ranch. The view. The beautiful view of the wetlands, the lagoon and Point Lobos. Also the old buildings, which are well maintained. The ranch house must be 150 years old, and the present restaurant and barn are one of the first of the early California dairies.

This is what many groups are trying to preserve. This is the land some would like to develop.

The land, at least, Juan Romero would recognize. Other things might confuse him. If he could see his $300 ranch and if he could hear some of the rumored prices now being asked for the property, he might just die for a second time.

(P.S. This article was written before the latest deposition of the Mission Ranch had become a fact. Thanks to those who stopped the development of townhouses by out-of-town developers, the Carmel Heritage and the super great generosity of our "Sugar Daddy" — Mayor Clint Eastwood. Juan and all of us can now rest in peace. H.W.)

Art instruction is lacking at Carmel Middle School

By DAVID LELAND

BLAME IT on the budget, call it a low priority or maybe a sign of the times, but no matter what kind of picture is drawn the fact remains that Carmel Middle School operates a sketchy art program.

With the retirement of art teacher Joe Broadman three years ago, Middle School lost its full-time art teacher and was never able to hire a new one. Instead it has scheduled teachers from other subjects to fill in their schedules by teaching art classes.

While this may seem like a viable option to the Carmel Unified School District, it appears the students may losing valuable years of instruction.

"It's very dangerous," said Sue Williams, who teaches art at Carmel High School. Williams inherits the Middle School students upon their graduation. "Now is when art needs to be amplified. It's the only experience to culture some of these people get."

Williams said that while the teachers at Middle School who are teaching art are trying their best, some skills are not being taught and she suffers the repercussions.

"I favor a bonafide art teacher (at Middle School), " she said. "We have to take a step backward (when they get to high school) to teach what they should have learned in Middle School."

About two-thirds of the 430 students choose art as an elective at Middle School, according to Principal Karl Pallastrini. These classes are spread over three periods, which makes it next to impossible to justify hiring a full-time instructor, he said.

Not only that, but hiring a part-time credentialed art teaher would also not be a feasible solution for either the CUSD or the instructor. Pallastrini said very few, if any, teachers would be willing to relocate to earn the less than $10,000 annually that a part-time teaching job pays.

Currently art classes at Middle School are taught by Scott Rainer, industrial arts teacher; Janet Barker, science teacher and Tom Cloud, language arts teacher.

It should be noted that each of these three instructors have some arts background and are well received by the students and staff.

Nevertheless, it appears a choice has been made to de-emphasize the arts program at Middle School by the CUSD and concentrate on courses such as computer science.

'I favor a bonafide art teacher (at Carmel Middle School),' said Sue Williams, Carmel High School art teacher. 'We have to take a step backward (when they get to high school) to teach what they should have learned in Middle School.'

"A school cannot be all things to everybody," said Bob Infelise, CUSD superintendent. "Priorities change due to the budget crunch."

Indeed, it has become the district's policy to procure outside sources to help with its fine arts programs. An example of this can be seen in the Frohman Academy's assistance in providing a music teacher at Carmel High School.

This fall the Frohman Academy set up its offices at Carmelo School. In return for a break in rent, Frohman officals have been providing music and dance instruction in CUSD schools.

In the meantime the CUSD has chosen to put its thrust into a more traditional academic approach.

"If I have to choose between academia and art I would make that (academia) choice every time," Pallastrini said.

WHEN BROADMAN retired, he left behind one of the most well-equipped art classes in the district. The majority of these teaching aids are for naught.

This includes a 500-slide collection from art galleries and museums worldwide, which is locked in a closet in back of the art class.

"This may be the best facility around," Pallastrini said. He added that Middle School was originally intended to be used as a high school, which accounts for much of its equipment.

But the problem with utilizing all of the teaching aids, according to Rainer, one of the three art teachers at Middle School, is it becomes too great a task to incorporate these aids into your lesson plan.

"It's difficult to use sombody else's (aids)," he said. "They're your own personal experience."

Rainer believes the job being done at Middle School is sufficient for the students' needs. If they want more exposure the children can set out on their own.

"They can develop skills on their own if they wish," he said.

But even if the child is given exposure to the fine arts at Middle School scheduling has dictated a drop in instruction time.

Instead of having a semester to give a well-rounded approach to art, Rainer said the classes are only offered for 12 weeks at a time, or a trimester system. This is equivalent to only 60 hours of instruction.

Rainer said the goals of Middle School during this 12-week period are to teach aesthetic value, aesthetic perception, art heritage and creative expression to the students.

Students at Middle School until recently spent either a semester or a year learning these factors, Rainer said.

But perhaps the most tragic loss will be felt by students entering Middle School from Carmel River School, where they have been studying art.

Recently, River School hired a full-time art teacher to work with the children. This is offered as a separate class to educate the children in the fine arts.

What Williams, who oversees the district art program, fears is youngsters who develop a keen interest in art in grades kindergarten through fifth-grade will spend the next three years at Middle School stagnating.

"It's going to require the district to hire a full-time art teacher," she said. Or, at the very least, she added, the teachers at Middle School will need to begin taking classes to hone their skills in art instruction and knowledge.

Though not a public hearing, the committee welcomes attendance by the public and will listen to input from citizens.

Christmas tree sales to benefit Youth Baseball

CARMEL YOUTH Baseball officials hope to raise enough money from selling Chirstmas trees this year to help offset the cost of installing a sprinklet system on the athletic field near Junipero Serra School.

The Christmas tree lot is open weekdays from 2 to 10 p.m. and weekends from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and is located at Junipero Serra School, 2992 Lausen Drive in Carmel.

Prices for the trees range from $22 to $41.50, depending on the type and size of tree. The lot will offer Douglas Fir, Grand Fir and Noble Christmas trees.

Hearing on Hatton Freeway set for Dec. 11

CALTRANS HAS scheduled a public hearing for 7 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 11, in the Carmel Middle School Gym, to hear comments on the proposal to improve Highway 1 in Monterey County from just south of the Carmel River to the Pacific Grove Highway 1 Interchange, according to Caltrans spokesperson Eddie Devens.

Caltrans has studied the effects this project will have on the environment. The alternatives studied were widening Highway 1 along the existing alignment, and relocating Highway 1 eastward along a new alignment through Hatton Canyon.

Comments by elected officials and private citizens will be made a part of the record of this hearing. Questions concerning the environmental issues, design features, and right of way needs for the various alternatives will be addressed.

The gym will be open from 4 to 6 p.m. on that day for pre-hearing map showing. Caltrans staff will be in attendance to discuss the project with concerned persons.

City will crack down on habitual parking offenders

By DAVID LELAND

CARMEL CITY officials are mad as hell and they're not going to take it anymore — it being the almost 400 "habitual" parking offenders who owe the city $127,397 in overdue parking fines.

The first step Carmel has taken to pursue these petty offenders is to hire a private contractor to compile a list of these people and compose a form letter to be sent this December. The letter will be signed by City Atty. Don Freeman.

The letter gives the person a list of their outstanding violations, tells them how much of a fine is owed, and what they can expect if they ignore the warning.

A habitual offender, according to Jack McGilvray, chief of police, is a person who has five or more unpaid parking violations.

The offenders will have 15 days to respond to the warning by sending a check to the Office of Parking Violations in Monterey. If they choose to ignore the warning harsher measures may prevail.

McGilvray said the police have the option of either impounding the person's car or placing a "boot" on its front wheels, this immobilizes the car. If the car is impounded, an added expense of towing and a daily storage fee will be tacked onto the parking penalty.

"Definite action will be taken to resolve this tremendous problem," McGilvray said. "These are people who choose not to abide by the parking restrictions within the city."

Besides the city losing revenue from the unpaid fines, people in the downtown shopping area, where most of the infractions occur, cannot find a place to park.

"The parking does not turn over," McGilvray said, meaning that spaces are occupied for more than the allotted time. He added that the majority of the offenders are residents of the peninsula — many times they are business owners in town.

One such violator has managed to compile 60 parking violations in the downtown area between January of 1985 and May of 1986. McGilvray said these were posted "within a couple of blocks" from each other. His bail now stands at $1,832. He has also received 30 notices from the court and 30 notices from the state Department of Motor Vehicles.

Until now notices have been the only punitive measures taken against the violators. While these can put a hold on a person's car registration, their car remains mobile.

"The frustrating thing is the party has been notified by the DMV that a hold has been placed on their registration," McGilvray said. A hold on a person's car registration means that when they try to pay yearly license fees they find the registration will not be issued until their parking fines have been paid.

But by looking at the police statistics concerning the amount of the fine and location the ticket was given, it becomes obvious that as long as they have their car the habitual offenders will continue their established pattern.

One person listed with Carmel police had 17 violations totalling $497 — all were at the corner of Seventh Avenue and San Carlos Street.

McGilvray said a profile of the habitual offender shows 12 violations, with an average fine of $321.

ON ANOTHER level, however, it appears notifying people of their infractions may be a civilized but unrealistic approach to the problem of negligent parking fines.

Such has been the case in Monterey. That city sent out about 230 letters on Aug. 15 to parking offenders, with the stern warning to pay up now.

"We have not seen a huge increase in collection," said Marie Mlacnik, Monterey revenue officer. "I'm not happy with it at all."

Mlacnik said of the initial 230 letters sent at least 75 came back because the party had moved and left no forwarding address.

After the latest campaign to gather money owed the city for parking tickets, Mlacnik is convinced harsher measures are needed.

Namely, the dreaded boot. The only problem with this device is the city does not own one; Mlacnik said they range from $200 to $400, but it may be worth the price.

"I think we'd be a lot more effective with the boot or towing," she said.

RECREATION DIRECTOR Beth Kastrup said she will move forward slowly with her development of recreational programs in Carmel. While the first meeting of the Recreation Commission is not scheduled until January, Kastrup has already begun meeting with the commission members. (Holly McFarland photo.)

New rec commission formed, no big changes planned yet

By DAVID LELAND

EVEN THOUGH Carmel now has completed the process of hiring a full-time recreation director and appointing seven recreation commissioners, don't expect any exciting changes immediately, according to new rec director Beth Kastrup.

The commissioners were appointed Dec. 2 by Mayor Clint Eastwood, after reviewing 26 applications for the volunteer positions filed at city hall.

The seven-member commission is composed of Pat Sipple, Harriet Roundtree, Merv Sutton (all former members of the disbanded recreation committee), Maxine Jennings, Robert D'Isidoro, Richard Falge and Laurie Schuman.

But Kastrup said she will proceed slowly with the recreation commission and even slower with the city in implementing new programs for Carmel.

"I'm testing the waters," said Kastrup after about two weeks in her new position. "I need to take a look at the programs that need to be serviced."

Kastrup said the first formal meeting of the recreation commission will take place "sometime in January" but she will be meeting individually with each member beginning this week.

The recreation commission will have several duties. The first is to finish amending a provision to the city's general plan which will further identify Carmel's needs on a recreational level. This is a job which was started by the recreation committee several years ago.

The commission will also work with Kastrup, the Carmel Youth Center and the district's schools.

As far as area youth is concerned, there will be "no big program changes until the summer," Kastrup said. She added none of the existing programs at the youth center will be dropped.

It is hoped, she said, that this summer a host of outdoor programs will be available to Carmel's vacationing youngsters. These would include nature camps, field trips, art classes and beach activities such as kayaking.

HERE IS a brief profile on each newly-appointed recreation commissioner and their philosophy on recreation:

• Maxine Jennings served as director of community relations, alumni affairs and housing at the Monterey Institute of International Studies. She also brings with her to the recreation commission a myriad of experiences both at home and in the Far East in the field of recreation.

"I would like to promote friendliness and communication, as well as an atmosphere of cooperation between the different generations residing in Carmel," she wrote in her application to Eastwood. "My personal philosophy on recreation is that it provides the body, mind and spirit the stimuli that enhances the life of a person."

• Robert D'Isidoro, Carmel attorney, brings with him to the recreation commission a knowledge of health and safety issues at both state and local level.

"Recreation is not limited to physical activity, however, cultural and other leisure and personal enhancement should not be the focus of the Recreation Commission," he wrote to the mayor. "The need is for a comprehensive community program that will enhance our use and appreciation of the exceptional environment we share...Carmelites of all ages will benefit from physical activity which is fun and increases our capacity to enjoy our daily lives."

• Richard Falge, a certified public accountant, comes to the recreation commission as one of the founding members of FOCUS (Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools), past president of Carmel Barracudas swim team, and treasurer of the Boy Scout Council in San Benito County.

"Recreation is very important for the physical and mental well being of humans in all age groups," Falge said in his application. "Citizens that are physically and mentally healthy provide the kind of input necessary for a healthy community. Quality recreation should be available for all age groups."

• Harriet Roundtree has served on the recreation committee since 1982. She has been doing community volunteer work since 1938.

"Recreation is any activity which I do voluntarily for personal satisfaction, enjoyment and relaxation of tension," she wrote in her resume. "I cannot by myself...enjoy safe recreation unless my community, through its governmental resources, provides me with those opportunities."

• Laurie Schuman, retired school teacher, has served at Community Hospital of Monterey Peninsula and currently volunteers for the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross.

"People today have more leisure time than ever before," she wrote in her application to Eastwood. "If we accept the definition of recreation to be 'the wise use of leisure time,' then I believe it is the responsibility of every community to provide a creative and coordinated recreation program that will meet the needs and desires of all citizens."

• Pat Sipple, a teacher at Santa Catalina School, served on the recreation committee from 1983. She also served on the library board from 1966 to 1980, as well as the

Planners want second-story apartment impacts lessened

sold only the "highest quality art," primarily American Impressionists and seascapes. Many of the artists, she added, are not shown in Carmel. To demonstrate the quality of art, Pomeroy passed around two examples of the artists she will represent in the gallery.

She and her husband are moving to the area and hope to continue the gallery she had in Southern California, she said.

Business neighbors of the building, including Rosemary Blackstone of Rosemary & George children's shop across the street and Jack Wagner, Lincoln Street apartment owner, objected to another space being dedicated to an art gallery.

Wagner said he felt that it would be better if the space was given to a shop that catered to local people.

"There is an unfortunate inundation of five galleries within a 500-foot strip along that street," Wagner said.

Blackstone told the commissioners that most other businesses couldn't pay the high rents an art gallery can because a gallery has a low overhead.

"That make it more difficult for other businesses to compete," she said.

Dahlstrand led the commission debate on the subject, stating he felt "the city's concern about art galleries is misdirected. I think what people are talking about is quality of art" and that the impact is only bad if "there is a lot of junkie merchandise around." The art the Pomeroys had presented, he said, was very high quality, a point all the commissioners agreed with.

"I disagree," Roberts said. "I think the impact on the community is exactly what this lady (Blackstone) said. He said that "we see more and more of local businesses going out."

Ramsey agreed that it "was a very valid point," but asked whether there was any legal way not to allow certain businesses.

Dahlstrand disagreed with them, stating that art galleries had become the "whipping boy" of the city for years.

Commissioner Ed Hicks said he believed that a business should "enhance the viability" of the community.

Ramsey, restating a request made by Planning Director Diane White during her presentation, asked if there were any suggestions on what kind of application they could come back with that would statisfy the commission.

No one specifically responded to the request, but Commissioner Fred Keeble stated that a gallery should contribute something new to the art community in the village, a policy statement in the general plan. It was the "proliferation and concentration" of art galleries that concerned him.

The commission voted 6-1 to deny the application. Dahlstrand voted against the denial.

IN OTHER business, the commission:

• Approved a use permit to divide Carmel Vintage Shoppe on Dolores Street. Jack Hakim's application to subdivide the 2,800 square foot commercial space triggered the master use permit ordinance, the same ordinance a division of the Sprouse-Reitz Variety Store was reviewed under.

The master use permit brings the entire building under inspection for compliance to city codes, including parking standards, when there is an increase in commercial space.

Recently, the planning commission and Carmel City Council returned to architect George Brook-Kothlow and businessman Roxy Rapp, the Sprouse-Reitz applicants, approximately $62,595 in in-lieu parking fees assessed by the previous administration through the master use permit ordinance. A letter of credit for the same amount was also returned, for a total of approximately $126,000.

National hero honored

THE FAMOUS and the mere popular fans and admirers went to Fort Ord Officer's Club Sunday afternoon to celebrate the 90th birthday of Gen. James H. Doolittle of Carmel Valley. The guest of honor, still straight as an arrow, arrived on time with his wife Josephine and other family members. (They have 14 grandchildren.)

Bob Herschede, formerly in the USAF, and currently governor of The Quiet Birdmen of the Carmel Valley Village Hanger, paced the program as master of ceremonies and laced it with humor.

A numbef of speakers paid tribute to the legendary native Californian who graduated from Berkeley and went on to become the first MIT graduate to receive a doctoral degree in aeronautical engineering.

Commander of Fort Ord, Maj. Gen. William Harrison said, "my birthday present is a pledge to follow in your footsteps." Rep. Leon Panetta presented the Congressional Award stating, "His greatest tribute is an example for the children."

Assemblyman Sam Farr said, "When I was a kid I read "Thirty Seconds over Tokyo. My first encounter with the general was — of all places at a garbage dumpster. I took our garbage out as the general was taking out his office excess." Mr. Farr presented a proclamation from the California Legislature adding, "Gen. Doolittle personifies the very best in America. He is a great California citizen and a great supporter of Guide Dogs For the Blind."

Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood, who was introduced as "a man who has never lost an election," recalled, "When I grew up my Superman was Gen. James Doolittle. I also idolized Spencer Tracy who portrayed the general in the movies." He closed with "Thanks for allowing a generation to fly vicariously."

Adm. Robert Austin thanked the general for "The raid which saved many lives." He presented a photo to "Admiral"

GEN. JAMES "Jimmy" Doolittle (left), meets Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood and Walt Stewart at a reception at Fort Ord Officers' Club honoring the renowned flier and leader of the famed Doolittle's Raiders' air strike on Tokyo during World War II. The reception was in honor of Doolittle's 90th birthday, which is coming up Dec. 14. Stewart organized the reception. (John Livingstone photo.)

Doolittle, who in 1925 was on the Joint Army/Navy Task Force and came to Ohio for a parade, where the photo was taken. "So the general spent on day in the Navy," he joshed.

Donald Rossi, president of Guide Dogs For the Blind, came down from the San Rafael headquarters with a busload of his people. Mr. Rossi made this point, "Our purpose is the same as the general's — to make the world a better place to live. We at Guide Dogs serve all of the United States and Western Canada and help servicemen who came back home without their sight."

L. B. Roberts, (Lt. Gen. Ret.), a friend of Gen. Doolittle, told this story, "In 1971 I spent two weeks in Japan as guest of Gen. Nakamura. He was a captain in Tokyo during WWII and told me 'we were usually given an alarm warning for raids, but one day at 11 a.m. several planes came in suddenly and we realized they were American aircraft. We had been told that the Americans would never be able to invade Tokyo. That morning we knew that we could lose the war.' This is a story the general has not heard before."

Retired Gen. E. W. "Brick" Holstrom gave a recap of the Tokyo Raid story and called Gen. Doolittle "the greatest living American." He read only a few of the many telegrams received.

Congratulatory wishes came from President Ronald Reagan and Nancy which said (in part), "Perhaps no one person more embodied the Golden Age of flight or contributed more to the advancement of aeronautics . . . In peace and in war, in civilian life and military, you have been a true pioneer . . . I remember your triumphs in air racing in the 1920s and 1930s . . . but what will forever stand out in the minds of your countrymen is the daring mission we call the "Doolittle Raid" that let our country dare to hope for victory." Ex-President Gerald R. Ford said, "You stand for patriotism of the highest order."

Armand Hammer wrote, "I will soon be catching up to you, and I hope that in May 1988 you will join me for my 90th birthday party in Washington, D.C. I regret that we cannot be with you today, as we will be in China."

Greetings came from Gov. George Deukmejian; Lt. Col. (USAF Ret) Frank Kappeler (one of the raiders on Tokyo); Aerospace Corp. chair James W. Plummer and President Eberhardt Rechin; Foster (The Lush) Brooks; Buddy Hackett; Gen. USAF (Ret) Richard A. Knoblock (chair Doolittle Tokyo Raider); Robert Guggenheim; Stuart Symington, and USAF (Ret.) C. V. Glines (Professional Pilot magazine); and March AFB Commander Lt. Gen. James E. Light Jr.

Guests for this tribute reception will go down in history if they signed the guest book in the lobby as directed by Gail Compton, Sandy Faas, and Bob Meyer.

Working with Walt Stewart chair for the Doolittle tribute and for the local chapter of Guide Dogs For the Blind (the sponsor and beneficiary), were Nell Meyer and Gen. Holstrom.

The hors d'oeuvres tables were filled with hot and cold dishes and fruit. Holly branches decked the tall candelabras.

Dec. 14 is actually the correct birthday, so we still have time to say, "Happy Bithday General Doolittle!" In store also is the 69th wedding anniversary of Jimmy and Josephine on Dec. 24th. December is truly a month to celebrate in the Doolittle household.

REGGIE JACKSON OUT FOR THE BOY SCOUTS

The superstar slugger — baseball's Reggie Jackson — did attend the Boy Scout Holiday Auction. The Boy Scouts and their supporters were thrilled. Mr. Jackson drove down from Oakland and was whisked from his Carmel home to the Monterey Peninsula Country Club by Tom Koontz just in time for dinner Saturday night.

For the first time in auction's four years, the Honorary Chair appeared in person. Sylvia Panetta got stuck in a snowstorm, Lauren Green could not come, and Gen. Doolittle was unable to attend last year. The baseball hero was worth waiting for. For starters he donated $1,000 to the Boy Scouts and in his short address to the group he said, "I plan to spend more time in my Carmel home and to become more involved in the community here." This was great news for everyone.

No sooner than Mr. Jackson sat down for dinner when out of purses came baseball cards and baseballs which he graciously autographed. Later he drew the raffle number for his autographed book he had given to the Boy Scout Council. Hubert Falks was the lucky winner.

The cheerful art of Eldon Dedini greeted guests as they arrived — adorning the front cover of the Fourth Annual Holiday Auction, Boy Scouts of America, Monterey Bay Area Council. The original framed painting, and posters were available for purchase along with the first three scout posters done by Hank Ketcham. All to benefit more than 12,000 Scouts in Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties. (The posters are still available by mail.)

Mrs. George Hill bought a Tokyo Raider sketch signed by Gen. Doolittle; Paul Laub bought twin sailboats and diamond earrings; Donald Mammen bought a mink coat (donated by Panache) for his wife, Ferne, (a vice president of the Boy Scout Council); Nader Agha's bid was the highest for the Dedini original, the VW Rabbit and other items.

The avid bidders (exceeding 200) bought everything — all 432 items displayed — and 14 Explorers Post Scouts (young men and women) assisted in loading the prizes into autos and vans.

HIGH TEA and HIGH FASHIONS

The bright green music-backed invitation with notes for Oh Holy Night (by the English composer Adam) bespoke the elegance of High Tea given by the Carmel Music Society last Wednesday afternoon. Ladies and quite a few gentlemen were served sherry (courtesy of Burney Threadgill), scones (baked by Del Monte Bakery), open-faced tea sandwiches, cookies and tea in the charming La Playa Hotel.

The green and white theme was carried out with centerpieces by Anne McFarland's artistry and the white six-0 (denoting the 60th birthday of the society) flanked by potted greenery.

As though that was not enough, the very quiet and effective Lequita Watkins asked Gloria Rittmaster to bring over the latest in high fashions from Paris and New York. Rittmaster jewelry completed the stunning outfits shown by high fashion models, including the hadsome Greg Rittmaster.

Mistress of ceremonies, Jackie Mathis, made her entrance down the runway in a gold blouse and black flouncy skirt. Fashions were leathers, sweaters, knits, furs (often combined in the same garment) and daytime and nighttime glamour to the piano artistry of Marjorie Chomiak.

Assisting with the High Tea were Harriet Shanner and Barbara Ehenprise.

MUSIC & THE ARTS BENEFIT FOR CHILDREN

The organizers of An Evening of Music and the Arts wanted to put on an affair with class. And they did! Black ties and elegant gowns were seen in the main lobby of the Monterey Plaza Hotel sipping wine (courtesy of The Monterey Vineyard) and nibbling fancy hors d'oeuvres given by the Plaza with music by Scott Fitzgerald floating in the air.

After Lynn Traynor, board president of Family Resource Center, presented a bouquet of flowers to Kathy McFall (of Carmel's Village Artistry) for her prodigious efforts on behalf of Friends of the Children, the party moved to the downstairs foyer. Original artworks were displayed on easels for easy viewing and inspired bidding as Antony McNaught conducted the live auction.

Sylvia Stewart, who came to bid and buy, said, "I came for three reasons: to buy art for gifts, to help a good cause, and beside it makes me feel good."

Make YOUR Smile a winner!

Bonding is not a new procedure. In this, the era of holistic health, physical fitness, and "be the best you can be" mentality, bonding has come of age.

Bonding is a relatively simple procedure. A composite resin or porcelain material is added directly to the roughened enamel surface of the tooth. Usually no anesthesia is required.

Gorgeous artist Mary Titus (who produces gorgeous paintings) related, "I saw you (yours truly) on KMST talking about this benefit for the Family Resource center going for services for children, and asked myself 'Why don't I get in on these things?' So I called them, framed one of my paintings and brought it down for the auction."

Other generous artists who donated works included George DeGroat, Clarice Embrey, Robin Gregory, Maureen Fenton, Alec Gonzales, and others — more than 40 in all.

Assisting in the event were Lynn Traynor, Bill McCrone, Phil Snowden, John Angelo, D. Kent Nelson, Jerry Traynor, Arlala Sheppard, Karen Nencini and members of the board. Kathy McFall called the evening a success and hopes to aid the children by making it an annual happening.

FESTIVAL'S JOY TO THE WORLD

With 100,000 volunteer hours given to Festival of Trees throughout this year, nothing less than Joy To The World (the theme) could possibly be expected to tell the story.

Heralding the arrival of the holiday season, joy prevailed at the preview gala for the most spectacular event of each December . . . the chance to revel in a forest of artistically decorated trees in Exposition Hall at Monterey County Fairgrounds.

More than 400 guests came for the opening of the 18th traditional Festival of Trees to benefit one of the primary cultural centers of the central coast — the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

The avenues of trees held the towering 12-footer bought by the Monterey Sheraton and the 9-footers of Citicorp Savings, Dr. Patrick Keeley, Martines B & B, and the Sardine Factory.

Particularly eye-riveting were: Dr. Doolittle purchsed by Dr. George Bishop and generously donated to Gateway Center; Butterflies going to Butterfly Tree Lodge; A Victorian

CARMEL YOUTH CENTER

By Jeff Bell

Christmas in Carmel

LOOKING DOWN the sidewalks, all the shops are decorated in the holiday tradition. City trees glow with a rainbow of colors. People hustle and bustle as shopping goes on, while children ogle toys and new skateboards. Perhaps you may get a glimpse of St. Nick as he listens to the lists of children. Singing songs of Christmas you may stroll down Ocean Avenue. Christmas always has a way of bringing smiles to everyone. Look out for some big smiles when Christmas vacation begins Dec. 20 for students in our area.

Before that time, some great events will be happening at the Youth Center. Thursday, Dec. 18 kicks off the Carmel High School Basketball Tournament. Teams from area schools will be competing in the event. The youth center will be hosting the Santa Cruz team. Games start in the afternoon and last until evening, Dec. 18, 19 and 20. For a real bonus, the youth center and the ASB of Carmel High (Janice Aldrich, president) will sponsor a Games Dance Fri. Dec. 19. A great way to kick off the Christmas vacation!

Do you enjoy marching in parades? If so, join the Carmel Youth Center Baton Twirlers! Desiree Suhr and Tina Buffo instruct the use of baton every Saturday afternoon from 4 to 5 p.m. Classes are just starting so come in and sign up. Karate more your style? The youth center offers karate classes every Tuesday and Thursday night from 7 to 8 p.m. Sensei Carl Quigg urges everyone to beat the Christmas rush and sign up early for the new year. Brave enough to run the Big Sur Marathon? Coach Bell's 500-mile club prepares you for 6K, 10K, and 26 mile marathons. Classes are at 4 to 5 p.m. every day except Wednesdays.

The youth center offers a variety of entertainment for students in the Carmel Unified School Disctrict. We offer video games, pool, ping pong, foosball, big screen TV, first run movies and other great indoor sports.

You may have heard about the man who came in for one of our "Best Hot Dog on the Planet" hotdogs. He had come all the way from Medina! Where is that? Our world-famous executive chef, Monsieur le David Rich, prepares a most exquisite biftek for a dollar. Please come in to try our legendary "Snack Bar," home to some of the finest prepared cuisine in Carmel.

During the Christmas holiday the youth center will be open from 12 to 8 p.m. We will be closed Dec. 25, 26 and Jan. 1 and 2. Our regular hours are 3 to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 3 to 11 p.m. Friday, and noon to 11 p.m. Saturday.

Membership in the youth center is $5 each year. You must be a student in the Carmel school district to use the facility.

Now for the trivia question of the week: Where was the first police station in Carmel?

"RANDY" SHETES
FULLY EXPOSED

Did Randy do in Rog Watersdown? She'll never tell, and you'll never know until you solve THE WATERSDOWN AFFAIR.

All you need is a slightly wicked attitude toward sex, deceit, larceny, blackmail, and murder. And, you need this "popular" episode of HOW TO HOST A MURDER™ party games.

It's England in 1936. Sir Roger has invited several guests to his fabulous country mansion. But soon murder ruins the party and the guests must decide who amongst them is guilty.

Did Randy, the rising young actress (and closet porno queen) do it? Or, Dr. Mal Praktiss? And, how about the secretary, Flo Wing Brooks?

HOW TO HOST A MURDER games are a wonderful way to entertain during the holidays. They come complete with 8 invitations, costume and menu ideas, and everything else you need to put on a memorable evening. Let us wrap one up for your Christmas at $25.00... just for fun.

BUSINESS BEAT

By Nancy Hills

Oh, that window

THERE ARE those that love it and those that hate it.

It's Whitney's window on Seventh between San Carlos and Dolores. I'm one of those that love it — it has a lot of character. The tiny stationery and antique toy store reminds me of a little old curio shop. Cozy and full of wonderful nooks and crannies.

That look and the nooks will be staying around, I've been assured, even though the shop is changing hands this month. Owner Jerrold Whitney is selling to clothes designer and artist Kazuhiro Kono from Los Angeles.

According to Georgia Dunlavy of Carmel Realty, who engineered the sale, Kono's cousin Yukihiro Kiyama will be running the operation and they plan to keep things the same — that "Old World charm" she said was the way he phrased it.

Some changes are in the wind, however, and interesting ones at that. Kiyama apparently is an expert in origami (the art of Japanese paper folding), Japanese tea ceremony and calligraphy. Maybe there'll be some fine examples of that ancient paper art gracing the shop.

Whitney won't be disappearing from the scene, either. He's planning on working in his little antique shop behind Whitney's and another one he's opened in Amador City.

Not exactly just around the corner, Amador is in the "foothills" of Gold Rush country. Whitney has purchased and restored a 135-year-old store where the miners used to purchase their supplies. He's stocked it with antiques and has opened a shop, J. B. Whitney, where he plans to spend about three days a week. It's that enterprise that prompted him to sell his Carmel shop after three years.

"I can't devote my time to the upstairs and the foothills and keep the stationery shop open, too," he said.

He'll be around helping the new owners, too, he said, so it'll be a busy holiday for Jerrold Whitney.

CROSSROADS CAPERS

The joint is jumping. New shops and new restaurants.

Open right now is Luschi, a new shop owned by Elizabeth and Luisito Festejo. Don't take your pet snake in, however, it might get nervous.

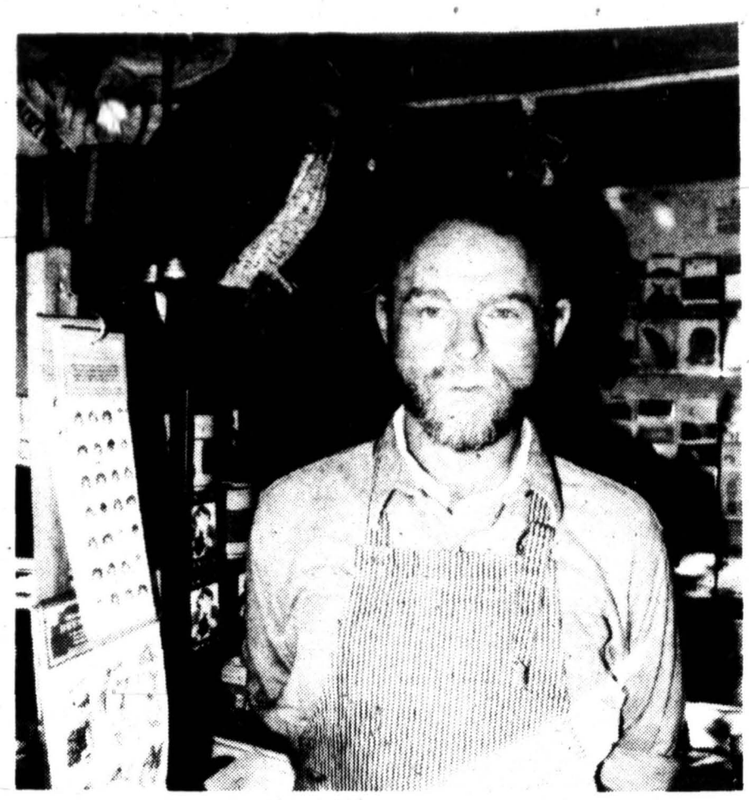
The shop specializes in eel skin, snakeskin and lizard skin shoes, handbags and accessories for both men and women, Elizabeth Festejo said.

All colors, all styles, from the elegant to mid-heel walking shoes. Handbags range from the everyday to the small cocktail carry-arounds.

While the quality is excellent, Festejo said, the prices are excellent, too, — almost wholesale. I've heard from those who should know that she's right.

Coming next week, is Jim and June Tajiri's sushi bar — we all hope. Aren't those little construction surprises fun?

Another up-and-coming enterprise is the changeover from Herb and Tara Evans' ownership of Cafe Central to Diana Kuwakara. The new name of the cafe will be Tokyo Central, and I hear it will be a combination of the former Cafe Central and a Japanese restaurant. If you go in now, you can get a little taste of what's to come. By the end of December, they should be in full swing, I'm told.



JERROLD WHITNEY, owner of Whitney's on Seventh between San Carlos and Dolores, is turning over the stationery shop's care and feeding to new owners Kazuhiro Kono and Yukihiro Kiyama this month. (Nancy Hills photo.)

Which brings up another point. The Evans are looking into buying The River Inn in Big Sur, which is currently on the market after being put in trust by the bankruptcy courts. Lots of fun there. Local contact on the property is Don Bowen of Carmel Business Sales.

"Since we live here on Pfeiffer Ridge close by, it's a logical step. We want to clean it up and make it a nice place again," Evans said.

DISPLAY OF CREATIVITY

Winners of the Carmel Business Association window display contest had a good audience and the pleasure of being awarded their prize by Carmel's Mayor Clint Eastwood.

Winners were:

- For art galleries and antique shops — first place, Interior Traditions, corner San Carlos and Fifth; second place, Armoire, corner Lincoln and Seventh; and third place, Decoy Gallery, Carmel Plaza.
- Hotels, inns and restaurants — first place, Sans Souci, Lincoln between Sixth and Fifth; and three second-place winners — Colonial Terrace Inn, San Antonio and 13th; Pine Inn, Ocean between Lincoln and Monte Verde; and Carmel Cafe, Mission between Sixth and Fifth.
- Shops — first place, L'Animal, Carmel Plaza; The Peppercorn, Carmel Plaza; and Gift Garden, Carmel Plaza.
- Others — first place, Hansel & Gretel Candy Store, Sixth between Dolores and Lincoln; second, Secret Garden florist, Dolores between Sixth and Fifth; Brentano's Bookstore, Carmel Plaza.

Add to the list of judges last week Doug Schmitz, Carmel city administrator, and — let's see — Bill Brown, publisher of the Carmel Pine Cone and Carmel planning commissioner.

Don't forget that Carmel merchants are going to stay open until 9 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 18 to allow local residents time to shop. Arrangements for that night are going well, according to CBA boardmember Toni Doyle. Doyle, by the way, received kudos for arranging the window display contest.

REP. PANETTA TO ADDRESS MILITARY ORDER

The Monterey Bay Chapter of the Military Order will hold a Christmas luncheon starting with a no-host bar at 11 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 16 at Rancho Canada. Guest speaker will be Rep. Leon Panetta. He will discuss the current situation in Washington and ways he may be able to help his constituents here.

The no-host bar will be followed by a roast beef lunch served at 11:30 a.m., with Panetta due to speak at 12:15 p.m. Music will be provided by Bruce Fargo.

Any officers of the U.S. Armed Services — active, retired or former officers — are invited to attend the lunch. The order was formed in 1919 and now has 20,000 members and 150 chapters nationwide. It is a patriotic-hereditary, non-partisan organization of armed service officers.

Reservations and advance payment are required for this event. Cost is $10 and should be sent to PO Box 123, Monterey CA 93942 by Fridat, Dec. 12. Last-minute phone reservations will be taken through Sunday, Dec. 14, but will be non-refundable. For reservations or information call Maj. Dick Cleaves at 375-4977, Capt. Hal Meyers at 373-5231, or Cmdr. Jack Branson at 375-8603.

WELCOME HOME FOR LOCAL PARTICIPANTS IN THE GREAT PEACE MARCH OF 1986

A "Welcome Home" reception for local participants in the Great Peace March of 1986 is planned for 7:30 p.m. Monday, Dec. 15 in the Community Room of the Monterey Public Library.

The reception is sponsored by the Monterey County Nuclear Weapons Freeze and will honor Susan DeVanna of Monterey, Bear Felici of Pacific Grove, Hal and Abe Newell of Big Sur, Jacquelyn Smith of Carmel and Verna Wicks of Seaside.

Smith, the original coordinator for the Monterey Freeze from 1981 until early 1986, will show slides of the 3,700 mile cross-country trek which began in Southern California on March 1, 1986, and ended Nov. 15, 1986 at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C. The local marchers will share stories and impressions of their adventure and answer questions.

The reception is open to the public and there is no admission charge.

CARMEL RESIDENTS COMPETE IN LAS VEGAS SENIOR CLASSIC

What's it like to play a competitive round of golf with golf greats Gay Brewer, Arnold Palmer, Doug Sanders and John Brodie? Just ask Jack Clark and Bill Rind, both of Carmel, who had the chance to play with these legends of golf at the inaugural Las Vegas Senior Classic held Nov. 6 through 9 at the Desert Inn Country Club in Las Vegas.

Clark and Rind both finished third with a net score of 63 in the amateur competition of the Las Vegas Senior Classic. They received a Waterford crystal vase for their efforts.

A total of 156 amateur players were teamed with Senior Tour Professionals on Thursday and Friday of the tournament. Clark played with Gay Brewer on Thursday and Walter Zembriski on Friday. Rind played with Joe Jimenez and Arnold Palmer. On Saturday each of the top 25 amateur players were teamed with two professionals for the championship of the Pro-Am. Clark's professional partners on Saturday were Larry Mowry and John Brodie, Rind's partners were Fred Hawkins and Doug Sanders.

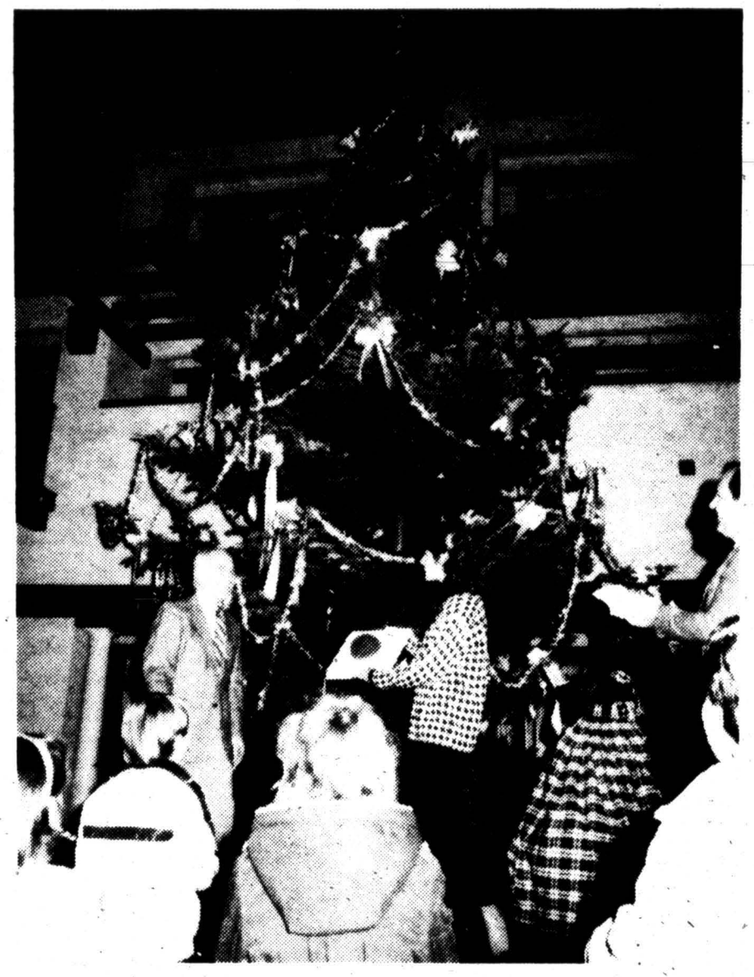
CANTREE COLLECTION BOXES IN PLACE THROUGHOUT PENINSULA

The Christmas CanTree drive, sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula and Carmel Boards of Realtors, got into high gear on Nov. 10, with the placing of collection boxes in eight peninsula communities.

The purpose of the drive is to collect cans of food, which will then be turned over to the Salvation Army for its program of feeding the hungry. All peninsula residents are urged to help bring some Christmas cheer to the needy.

The goal for the Monterey Peninsula is 100,000 cans, 5 per cent of the statewide goal of 2 million cans.

The canned foods may be brought to a collection box at a Realtor office, or to a participating local business. For those who would like to donate money, a check may be sent payable to the Monterey Peninsula Board of Realtors, P.O. Box 108, Monterey, CA. 93940. The check should be marked, "Christmas CanTree." It is, of course, a charitable contribution.



MONTEREY MAYOR Dan Albert prepares to light the Christmas tree at the Monterey Plaza Hotel during "Spirit of Christmas" ceremony, a kick-off for a month-long toy drive to benefit the children of the Family Resource Center sponsored by Security Pacific, Monterey Jaycees and KOCN. The event, attended by city and county officials, was preceded by a parade led by Santa down Cannery Row, with entertainment and refreshments at the Plaza. Holding the "button" is Julie Guinn, Plaza public relation director. Toy donations are accepted at various Security Pacific locations, KOCN and the Plaza through Dec. 22. (Mac McDonald photo.)

Contributors can also bring cans of food to the big Christmas CanTree that will be built 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 13, at Colton Hall in Monterey. Mayors from peninsula cities will stack the first cans, and after that there will be day-long music and entertainment as the community CanTree, made up of canned foods, rises to a spectacular height.

DECEMBER CHRISTMAS LUNCHEON

Members and guests of the Commodore Sloat Chapter of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution will meet for a Christmas luncheon and program at noon Tuesday, Dec. 16 at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club. Mrs. Gerald Chaney is in charge of luncheon arrangements. Reservations should be made by calling Mary Kathryn Coughlin (373-6652) immediately. Luncheon charge is $8.

Mrs. Delman H. Johnson and Mrs. Jack Gallaher, members of Commodore Sloat, will present the program which will consist of Christmas carols whose origins are rooted in the various ethnic groups which peopled the peninsula—Spanish, Mexican, Russian, Central European, Chinese and Japanese (the order of their arrivals in this area). Mrs. Johnson, an accomplished pianist will accompany vocal renditions by Mrs. Gallaher, director of the peninsula's Choraleers. There will also be opportunities for singing along.

Any inquiries as to membership in or activities of the local chapter of the NSDAR may call Mrs. William Gooley, Chapter Regent at 372-7492.

Advisory committee selected for Cachagua

FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman recently announced the formation of a seven-member Cachagua Citizens Advisory Committee.

The committee's primary function will be to work with the Monterey County Planning Department in formulating a Cachagua Area Plan. Committee work will begin soon and regular sessions will be held throughout the next several months.

Cachagua area citizens selected for the committee are: Lupe Alonzo, David Ostrander, Kathy Kepford, Charity Crane, Diana Freitas, James Kachler and Jean Cahoon.

"Cachagua is a large area of special interest in the county," Strasser Kaufman said. "It's the last of the Monterey Peninsula planning areas to be prepared by the county and we will need maximum citizen involvement to design an area plan incorporating the wishes of the Cachagua area resident."

Chapel pre-school extends programs

THE CARMEL Valley Community Chapel Preschool now provides full-day child care and pre-school activities for children ages 2½-5 years old.

The chapel preschool offers a safe place for young children, in an environment conducive to optimal growth, work and play. Included in the program are a variety of age-appropriate play experiences which contribute to the physical, social, emotional, intellectual and spiritual development of the individual child.

Learning materials and motivational activites that build important foundations for future reading skills and other academic pursuits are offered, as well as math, arts and crafts, games, gardening, cooking and music.

Under the supervision of a licensed director, Linda Ingram, the preschool staff is carefully selected for educational background, preschool teaching experience, creativity, and sensitivity to the individual needs. The newest addition to the staff is Marge Arvanitis — as full-time head teacher. She brings more than 16 years of experience running her own preschool program in Nebraska.

Extended hours, from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., now provide working parents with the opportunity to have both a caring and educational environment for their children throughout the day.

Contact Linda Ingram at the preschool, 659-3030, or the chapel office, 659-2278, for more information. Visit the preschool at 42 Village Drive, in the Fellowship Hall building of the Community Chapel (corner of Paso Hondo).

Cachagua area plan needs participation by area residents

PADRE PRATTLE

By Meredith May

625-HELP

DRUNK DRIVING is definitely a problem on the Monterey Peninsula. It is no longer a secret that many of these tragic, alcohol-related accidents involve teenagers from the area's school districts. The problem has become so serious and students feel so strongly about it that they have taken action to diminish the number of accidents. For a change here is some good news about what teens are doing in their spare time.

In response to the "we've-tried-everything" attitude, the students have taken part in a voluntary, non-profit organization called Safe-Rides. Made up of students and parents from Carmel, York, RLS, Seaside, Monterey and PG high schools, Safe-Rides provides transportation home for students who feel they shouldn't get behind the wheel.

Every Friday and Saturday night, five students and one adult gather in Community Hospital's conference room from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. to await telephone calls seeking assistance. Of the five volunteers, two are drivers, two are passengers who assist the driver and one person mans the radio. The radio dispatcher who stays behind is kept in contact with the drivers via radios operated by the passengers. The adult's only function is to make sure things run smoothly and to be ready to get medical help if an accident occurs.

Dee Myers, the head coordinator of Safe-Rides, describes how this idea for a solution to the teenage drunk driving problem came about.

"The We-Care Program, made up of parents on the Monterey Peninsula, was inspired by a PBS special called Chemical People which ran four years ago. The program discussed the rapidly growing drug and alcohol problem in the school systems. The program encouraged schools to form task groups to try and decrease the number of accidents. We-Care, in collaboration with the students, came up with Safe-Ride and it was hit!"

Two other programs, Peer Counseling and Parent Support, also came into being at the same time as Safe-Rides.

Safe-Rides prides itself on confidentiality. Many students are worried about being "found out" by teachers or parents if they call Safe-Rides. This is not so. Safe-Rides members respect the privacy of the people they assist.

So the next time you figure you've sobered up enough to "just get home," consider your alternatives. Think about all the people that love you and how hurt they would be if you got hurt. Think of all the people who don't necessarily know you, but care enough to create a program for kids who need a little help. Finally, remember the number. 625-HELP.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Happy Hanukkah

Invocation to the Carmel Rotary Club
December 16, 1981

Many of us in the Western world seem to forget that our blessed lord came from Jewish roots as did Mary and Joseph. They celebrated as a family all the Jewish feasts and festivals.

One of the most joyful is Hanukkah, the celebration of the lights in dedication. It honors the victory of Judas Maccabeus in 165 B.C., over the Syrian King Antiochus Epiphanes, an enemy of the Jewish faith.

Each evening the Menorah, or seven-branched candelabrum, is lighted at home. On the first night, one candle is lighted and it is called the "servant candle" and each night for eight nights another is added. This symbolizes that the light of faith is certain to grow if only a remnant of the faithful remains.

Each evening the servant candle gives light to the others to remind us that we, too, are strongest when we serve. At Hanukkah and Christmas we must resolve that we should not just give things but give of ourselves, the big smile, the big-hearted action, the kindly gesture. It's the heart strings, not the purse strings that count.

Christ's father expects more than our money. We are the coins he stamped with his image.

The poorest man in the world is he whose only wealth is money. And the only thing we get in this world on a silver platter is tarnish. Amen.

CBEST exams scheduled at college

The Monterey Peninsula College Counseling office will administer CBEST, the California Basic Educational Skills Test, which is required for those entering the teaching professions for grades K-12.

Free brochures on traveling

Over 70 educational travel programs ranging from eight to 42 days in the winter, spring and summer are detailed in the free 1987 Educational Travel Programs brochure now available from the American Institute For Foreign Study of Greenwich, Connecticut.

The institute, a subsidiary of AIFS, Inc., a publicly-owned company, has organized overseas learning programs for over 300,000 students, teachers and other adults since the organization was founded in 1964. While the programs were originally created for students, many travelers are adults who wish to take advantage of the low cost, educational opportunities.

Mini Programs are eight-to-10 day travel programs held during the winter, spring and summer.

All programs are escorted and include services of group counselors and couriers, roundtrip jet transportation from over 31 U.S. cities; breakfast and dinner daily (lunches on some programs), educational sightseeing, entertainment, airport to hotel transfers and tips.

For additional details and a free copy of the full color 90 page brochure write: American Institute For Foreign Study, Dept. P-1, 102 Greenwich Avenue, Greenwich, Conn. 06830 or call 203-869-9090.

What gifts would be appropriate for a friend or relative suffering from Alzheimer's disease? The Minneapolis chapter of the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association has offered some suggestions. Music in the form of a record, tape or simple rhythm instrument, or an album with bright, cheerful pictures, would be excellent. They also suggest a bulletin board with the person's name in large felt letters along with some family photos and other mementos. An identification bracelet with name, address and phone number could be useful, especially if the person tends to wander. Clothing ideas include a jogging suit for comfort, thermal slipper-socks or a sweater or shawl. Some patients also enjoy handling worry beads or similiar objects.

Carmel's Bob Campbell ...

Crime-infested mysteries are novelist's forte

By ANNE PAPINEAU

PART-WAY THROUGH Bob Campbell's newest novel, In La La Land We Trust, his readers might be moved to burn their clothing and retreat to a shower to scrub away some of the slime. Hoodlums drop-kick body parts. People are bought and sold — cheap. Children die in the line of porno movie making.

Such words from a man who resides in a book-lined cottage that, were it for rent, would be labelled "Carmel Quaint." Flowers flourish under his guidance. A lawn elf would not look out of place.

The cottage presents a deceptive front. This bay-windowed refuge houses a source not of Grimm's Fairy Tales, but grim tales. In a Campbell novel there's a strong chance the good guys will prove corrupt and the bad guys will get away with plenty. They commit murder and more.

Seated in a sunlit corner, a collection of timepieces dangling from the chandelier above his head, Bob Campbell writes.

NEWEST NOVEL by Carmel author Robert Campbell is In La La Land We Trust. Notes the flyleaf of the book: "Child porn, snuff films and drunken television stars in BMWs — that's what makes the L.A. world go 'round, whether the L.A. cops like it or not." Campbell has already drafted the follow-up, Alice in La La Land. (Anne Papineau photo).

"A lot of writers say the act of writing is painful," Campbell said. "To me the act of writing is a joyous act. The act of writing pleases me. It gives me the illusion I'm in control."

In an ad in the New York Times, author Joe Gores called In La La Land We Trust, "One of those rare near-perfect books ... outrageous, grungy, frightening and as taut as a tow cable. Whistler is the private eye for the '80s, and Campbell's cops, cruds, crudes and creeps are true coinage of the mystery realm."

Campbell has another hit.

The man in the storybook cottage has already written the successor to La La Land, appropriately titled Alice in La La Land. He keeps a lot corpses on ice at once.

Among his new projects: "Juice is about loan sharking and The Beasts of Benin is based on the Dian Fossey case," he explained, citing the American who studied the lives of mountain gorillas and was found murdered, possibly by poachers, at her African home.

He is also continuing his crime series that finds its focus in Chicago's Jimmy Flannery, "a tough Irishman with street smarts ... part of a political machine that runs on favors and friendships."

"In all the books I write," Campbell noted, "I try always to say, as long as there is one decently motivated person, there is a chance. Human affection bubbles out of the mud."

"There are hundreds of detectives out there vying for attention," he said of the business of fiction. "Mystery readers like to visit with the same character, and listen to the same voice."

Asked who are his readers, Campbell responded "I have not the vaguest idea."

CAMPBELL CUT his teeth in Hollywood. In the '50s, he portrayed convicted killer Caryl Chessman and romanced Kathryn Crosby in Death Row, Cell 2455. He then graduated to screenwriting. Campbell was 28 when he received an Oscar nomination for his Man of a Thousand Faces screenplay. James Cagney starred in the 1956 film, a biography of silent screen actor Lon Chaney Sr.

The author can cite similarities between screen writing and his present medium, the novel.

"In films and publishing, instead of chasing quality, they chase blockbusters. People are chipping off the corners and top and bottom of this shape that had been provided and what comes out are spheres. You find that in publishing more and more. Mass trade paperback editors are much more cavalier about changing a writer's intent. I've never been edited arbitrarily, because they know I'd raise hell."

Campbell's screenwriting credits include The Masque of the Red Death, Machine Gun Kelly, plus numerous television plays.

"As a screenplay writer, you're low man on the totem pole. Everybody and his uncle has the right to tell you what you meant with your characters. Directors have far more power, actors have far more power, producers have far more power. Writers have far less.

"Hollywood didn't please me. The attitudes we had to contend with were very unsatisfying — to realize that friendships were predicated on the level of success you were enjoying or the level of misery. This you realize when you go to these parties and people don't make eye contact because they're looking over your shoulder to see who else is showing up."

After investing more than two decades of his life in screenwriting, Campbell decided to move from film to the printed page. In 1978 he attended a booksellers' convention in San Francisco, and during this journey stopped off to visit friends in Carmel.

"I was here probably no more than five days when I realized I wanted to live here," he recalled.

Tony Curiel, associate artistic director for El Teatro Campesino, will stage the play, a celebration of drama, music and dance. The play tells of the humble Indio and the brown mother of Jesus Christ in the new world.

THEATER REVIEW

By Jean Thurman

'A Chorus Line' staged at college

A CHORUS LINE is the kind of musical that revitalizes the theater. It has the essential ingredients of theatricality — immediacy, intimacy, action, suspense, and the perfect rationale for song and dance — the setting being an audition for a chorus line.

The Monterey Peninsula College production, directed by Peter DeBono, shines in all aspects. The audience is swept up in the excitement from the moment the curtain opens on a stage filled with more dancers than it can possibly hold, until to the grand finale.

The premise of the play is difficult to accept. Why would the director of a musical want to spend two hours prying into the personal lives of potential chorus members? There are moments when the setting seems more like a consciousness-raising session than an audition. However, this gives each actor a chance to be in the spotlight for a few minutes — long enough to make the audience care about each one.

Some of the actors do such exciting work with their solos that you are left wishing they would do more! Jay Hudson gives a knock-out performance as Richie but it is far too short! Michelle Savage, John Kaupanger and Sheri Shaw share a charming naturalness. LaVonne Rae Andrews has a wonderful drop-dead delivery as Shirley. Sid Cato is hilarious as Bobby, not being afraid to take his time with what is basically a standup comedian's routine.

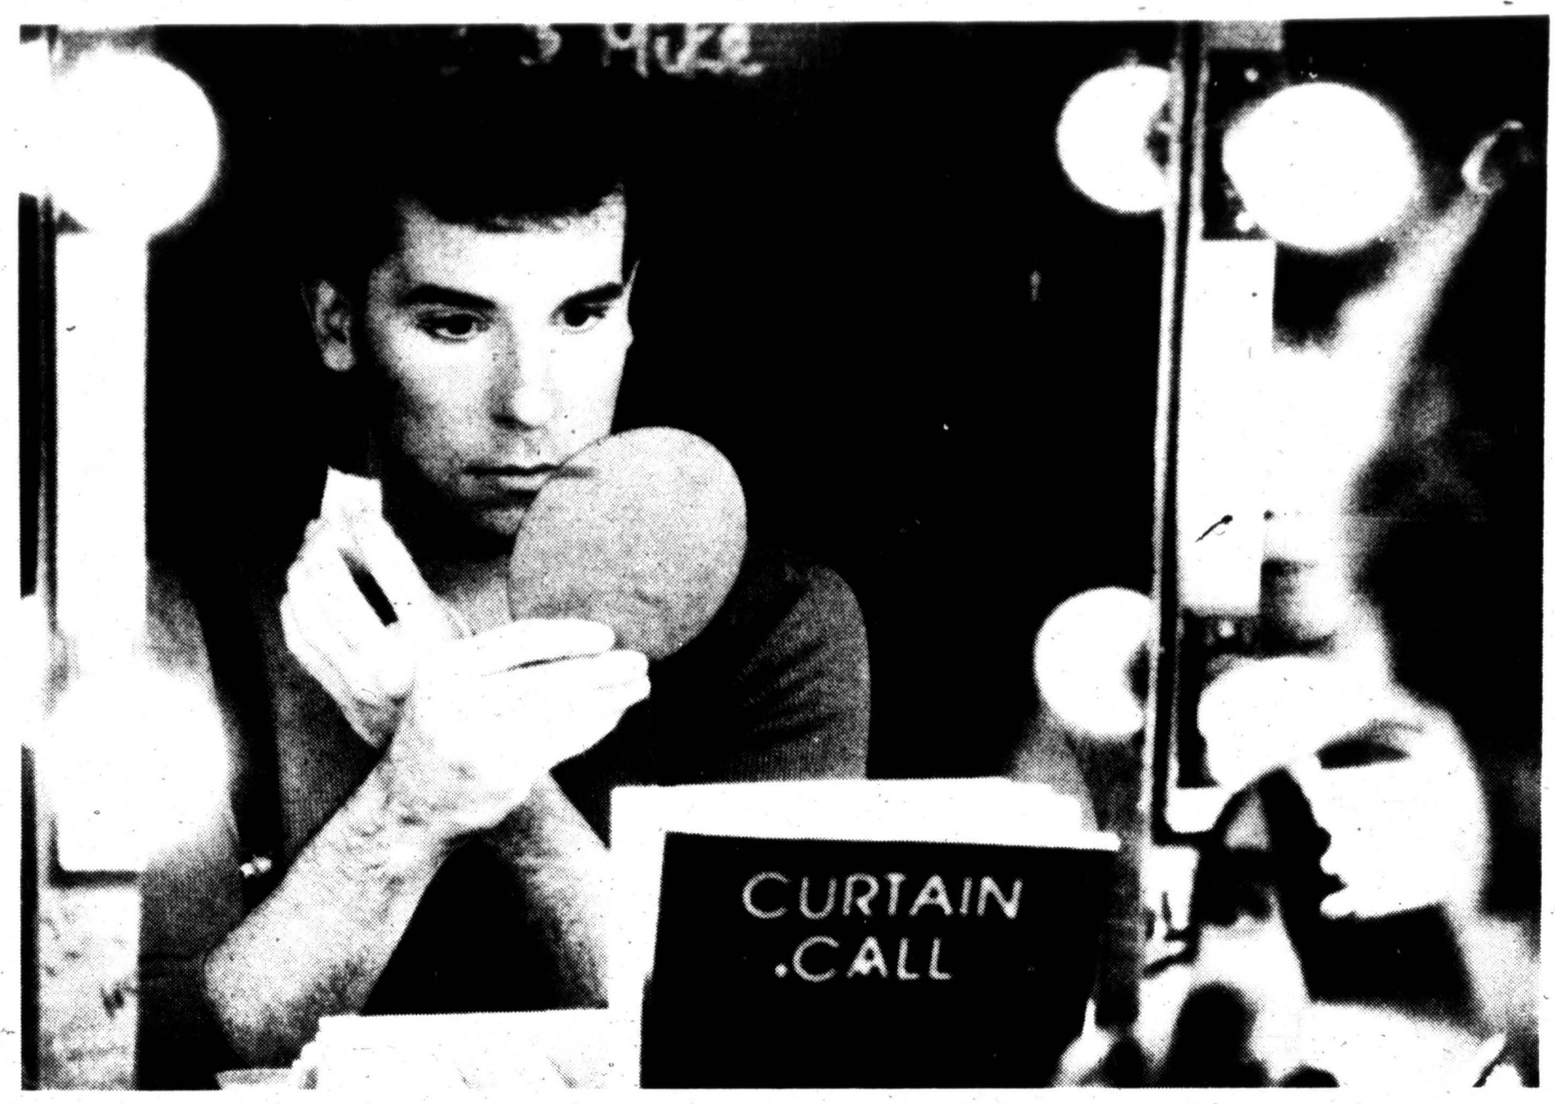
There are several show-stopping solos, including Lynnette Frave's "Nothing," Sandy Sidener's "Dance: Ten; Looks: Three," and John Kaupanger's "I Can Do That." But the show really belongs to the company.

The show is not, unfortunately, uniformly excellent. What should be the showcase number of the show, "The Music and the Mirror," is underplayed by Phyllis Lewis. As Cassie, the dancer who made it out of the chorus line but is now trying to start over, she should be the strongest member of the chorus. However, her performance is stiff, lacking punch. Cassie needs some evidence of star quality to set her off from the rest of the chorus.

Many of the voices in the ensemble don't have the range required, but almost every song is delivered with a verve that offset any missed notes. The dancing (which is, of course, the core of the show,) is always enjoyable. This is due both to the talented and energetic dancers and to the entirely suitable choreography of Carlton Johnston, assisted by Laura Akard.

MPC's theater department should be proud. This is the kind of show audiences obviously want to see — all performances are sold out. (Don't give up hope for a ticket, though; they are considering extending the run.) And the show is produced in a very audience-pleasing manner.

A Chorus Line runs Thursdays through Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2 and 7 p.m. As of this writing the show closes Dec. 21.



JOHN KAUPANGER is among the soloists in the Monterey Peninsula College production of A Chorus Line. Kaupanger sings "I Can Do That." (Photograph by Holly McFarland).

Hard realities color author's fiction

"I was still writing screenplays and teleplays — you have to be down there to do that. I knew there would be an interruption of income, but I decided to do it, and I've never left."

SEATED WITHIN the comfort of his bay window, Campbell writes almost every day.

"I break my books into 100-page chunks for convenience. I try to write five pages a day, which usually takes between three and four hours. There are occasions the work goes hard and it might take me six hours. Sometimes it goes like a breeze; after two hours I stand up."

His life is ordered, and includes regular visits to the Village Corner where waiters already know his breakfast order.

"Then I read the newspaper and reaffirm why I'm not in the maelstrom.

"What I like about being in this town is in the time it takes to go to the post office, I'll say hello to 10 or 15 people. Many cities have a sense of neighborhood, but Carmel has a sense of community. In the time I've been here a dozen people have died and a dozen have been born."

Campbell's novels include Circus Couronne (1978), Malloy's Subway (1981) and Fat Tuesday (1983), of which Cosmopolitan magazine wrote, "In this steamy, enthralling story, answers are ambiguous. Only the questions endure."

He has contracts for four more books to be published between now and August.

"Writing validates my life. It's not, 'what you do for a living — I'm a writer,' it's 'what are you — I'm a writer.' Very often I'll put in a couple of hours Saturday and Sunday. When I examine all my options for an afternoon, that's what I'd rather do."

Campbell sees in his literary revelations of vice and corruption a link with the writings of Charles Dickens.

"As harsh and vivid and graphic as the language is in In La La Land We Trust, it is not meant to titillate. There are no writers so unsophisticated that they think a sex scene will salvage a bad book. It was Dickens' strong feeling that the underworld society should be examined, that social ills should be exposed."

In La La Land, Campbell explores the pornography trade, including the production of "snuff films," movies that record actual murders.

"These things are very unsavory. But I can imagine in the time of Dickens, people sitting around saying 'Don't you think Charles has gone too far with Nicholas Nickleby, exposing the school system. I say that Dickens was writing crime novels with Oliver Twist and Bleak House, zeroing in on the ills of the time, of the sexual abuse of children in those schools.

"If I were going to be a crusader, I'd be an investigative reporter. I want to be an objective critic of this society. That does not mean that I am without anger."

In the tradition of fine mystery and crime novels, Campbell doses his stories with memorable details. In La La Land We Trust, for example, incorporates plot lines that have their basis in reality.

"On one occasion I met an officer assigned to kiddie vice in Los Angeles. He said he could deliver a boy or girl between the ages of 8 and 13 to your doorstep for $2,500, to do with what you will. That produced enough anger and enough passion for me to produce the book, but I don't say my book is going to clear up anything."

'If I were going to be a crusader, I'd be an investigative reporter. I want to be an objective critic of this society. That does not mean that I am without anger.'

A touch of humor is also interwoven into Campbell's novels.

"The Junkyard Dog is about Right to Lifers who blow up abortion clinics, which to me is a contradiction in terms," Campbell noted, a twinkle in his eye.

Each week Campbell monitors his writers and keeps an eye on the business of publishing.

"The essential nature of publishing is very capricious. The book you labored over and the critics loved — sinked without a trace. Sometimes it will recover years later and become a great success.

"I hear my book is selling well. Like anything else, whether you're a painter or a composer, you are constantly trimming your sails to the wind — even if you perversely turn the opposite way the wind is blowing."

MUSIC CORNER

By Jo Ann La Torra

County symphony, I Cantori stage 'Messiah'

THERE IS A SENSE in which Handel's Messiah represents the ultimate challenge to a conductor. Parts of it are familiar even to many not involved with "classical" music; thousands have sung portions of it; millions listen to portions of it every year.

To present a performance, therefore, that strikes conductor, musicians and audience as fresh and compelling is an awesome undertaking. Originality for its own sake is no virtue; on the other hand, it is difficult to get out from under generations of use and abuse.

Also, some of us have just heard and/or performed Messiah too many times. I will leave it at that, because for the many who still love it: Enjoy! There is always a sense of loss with the realization that one no longer gets pleasure from something once loved, but there is always the possibility the pleasure will return after a period of rest.

Not having apprised myself before Saturday's concert of how much of the work would be performed, and having incorrectly assumed it would be only the Christmas section, I was astonished to discover it was to be the WHOLE thing, Easter and all. I couldn't make it — I left after Christmas.

Nevertheless, Clark Suttle (Monterey County Symphony) and Sal Ferrantelli (I Cantori di Carmel) collaborated on a very solid and acceptable presentation. If it was not pristine Baroque styling, it was at least free of Romantic excess. For my taste, some of the tempos were slow, but that is personal. Most of the choruses were pleasantly brisk.

I Cantori was, as always, well-prepared. In spite of the fact that they outnumbered the orchestra by about two-to-one, the sound was never heavy and the quick runs had a nice shimmer. "For Unto Us a Child is Born" was especially lovely, with the melismatic passages bouncing off the beats and avoiding the too-often-heard leaning on each small note (the ha-ha-ha school of choral singing).

The soloists were uniformly disappointing. The alto lacked both the register and the shading of a low voice; the bass lacked tonal focus. Coloratura passages were rarely exciting and the tentative attempts at ornamentation were neither comfortable nor stylistically convincing. Perhaps they are tired of it, too.

There is so much wonderful music for the winter holidays. I don't want to take Messiah away from its devotees, but a good New Year's resolution would be for each music-lover to add one seasonal work to their repertory.

ROUNDUP

Costumes exhibited at Doud House

The Costume Committee of the Monterey History and Art Association will show a collection of vintage clothing at historic Doud House, located at Van Buren and Scott streets in Monterey.

The exhibit is titled "The Night of Dec. 24, 1910" and relates a two-part story — "I in my Hold-downs and Mama in her Peignoir" and "Fancy Dress, Ready at Last!"

These depict the activities of two families on Christmas Eve. One, at home with the children, enjoys the fireside. The other scene captures a couple dressed for a formal party. Old Monterey families donated the outfits.

Admission is free to the exhibit, shown 2 to 4 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays through December. For details, call 372-2608.

Christmas carols sung at Fort Ord

Christmas carols and yuletide cheer will be in order during a Sunday, Dec. 14 concert presented by the 7th Infantry Division (Light) Bayonet Band. Admission to the concert is free. It will begin at 6:30 p.m. at Stilwell Recreation Center.

Visitors entering the main gate of the post between 5:30 and 8:30 p.m. will be permitted to enter without going to the Visitors' Center if they identify themselves to the guards as Christmas concert-goers. Attendees should be in the far left lane in order to take the left turn onto First Avenue. Stilwell is located on the ocean, at the end of Eighth Street, Fort Ord.

Children's Christmas films shown

The Pacific Grove Public Library will present two short Christmas films for children, Morris' Disappearing Bag and The Clown of God. Children ages 2 to 8 are invited to attend the free, 30-minute program.

Show times are 10:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 17, and 10:30 a.m. Thursday, Dec. 18. The library is at 550 Central Ave., Pacific Grove. For more information, call 373-0603.

Camerata Singers schedule season's worth of music

THE CAMERATA Singers of Monterey County under the leadership of Dr. Vahe Aslanian have announced their sixth concert season.

Opening the season will be an all-French Baroque Christmas music program featuring Messe de Minuit by Marc-Antoine Charpentier.

The Christmas Music at the Missions concerts will be presented at 3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 14 at Mission San Juan Bautista and at 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 21 at Mission San Antonio in Jolon. The San Antonio program is made possible in part by a grant from the Monterey County Cultural Council.

Christmas Music at the Mission will also be offered at 8 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 21 at the Carmel Mission Basilica. The Camerata Singers will be accompanied by a chamber orchestra and assisted by guest soloists Anna Carol Dudley and Katrina Carlson, sopranos; Harlan Hokin, countertenor; Gene Albin, tenor and Peter Tuff, baritone.

Concert two will be a program of Jewish music featuring Ernest Bloch's Sacred Service. This portion of the series will be at Temple Beth El, Santa Cruz, at 8 p.m. Friday, April 24; and at 3 p.m. Sunday, May 3 at Peninsula Temple Sholom, Burlingame. The series concludes at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 26 at Temple Beth El, Salinas.

The Camerata Singers were organized in 1980 by Vahe Aslanian to provide opportunities for experienced singers to perform choral works in Monterey County and environs.

During his 30-year career as professor of music at Hartnell College, Dr. Aslanian directed the Hartnell College Choir, Chamber Singers and the Hartnell Community Chorus. He was the founder-director of the Hartnell Conservatory of Music.

The Camerata Singers is a not-for-profit organization. For season ticket information call 758-8970 or 625-4254.

'Bent-a-fit' concert helps SPCA

THE FOURTH annual Pelican Ball, a benefit for the Monterey County S.P.C.A. Wildlife Center, is scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 11 at The Club of Monterey.

JERRY FORD is among the headliners and organizers of the fourth annual Pelican Bent-a-Fit Ball. Doors will open 8 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 11 at The Club in Monterey. The show benefits the Monterey S.P.C.A. Wildlife Center.

The Pelican Ball was "born" four years ago in response to a rash of mysterious pelican slashings in Monterey. Jerry Ford, who heads BENT Productionsd, organized the event to help the S.P.C.A. Wildlife Center pay for the birds' care.

The Pelican Ball is an evening of non-stop entertainment ranging from good ol' rock 'n' roll to new wave to jazz fusion to the absurd. Non-musical performers such as comedians and jugglers are also slated to perform, and, in keeping with tradition, a Pelican Queen will be selected by the audience. Many surprises are in the works, and KMBY radio personalities will be on hand to give away prizes.

This year's headliner is Don Preston. Preston, who has been called a "musician's musician," recorded 15 albums with Frank Zappa and The Mothers of Invention, is responsible for movie scores including Apocalypse Now, and has musicial associations with many artists and groups, including Carla Bley and the London Philharmonic Orchestra.

Also performing are THE "X" Flys (fomer Medfly members), Yakida (also fromer Flys), local favorites Astonished Man, The Keys (music inspired by Lou Reed and the Beatles), the eccentric and electric J. Twang Brewster, and Monterey's most underground band, Bent.

Admission to the event is tax-deductible $5 at the door, $4 in advance. Tickets are available at the Record Asylum in Monterey. No minors will be admitted.

Spalding Pro-Am roster takes shape

THE FOUR LATEST entries for the upcoming Spalding Pro-Am include two seasoned veterans and two second year tour stars. Combined, the foursome has won more than $1 million during the 1986 tour year.

Heading the group is Ken Green, the international champion, with $317,835 in official winnings, good for 16th on this year's money list. Long-time tour star Don Pooley, winner of $268,274, his single season best and good for 22nd on the first, is returning to the Spalding after last year's initial visit.

Mark Wiebe returns to the Spalding after capturing his second tour title in as many years, with a victory in the Hardee's Golf Classic. His win, along with a runner-up finish at the Byron Nelson, highlighted his 25th place finish on the tour, good for $260,180 in official earnings.

Rounding out this talented group with $213,206 in 1986 winnings is veteran Roger Maltbie from nearby Los Gatos. Matlbie is a five-time winner on the tour, with three of those coming during his comeback season of 1985, which included the World Series of Golf.

Pooley, one of the more consistent performers through the years, has not won since the 1980 BC Open. The young lions, Green and Wiebe, have each won twice in their two years on the tour and have already established themselves as quality players to be reckoned with.

This foursome will challenge the likes of Greg Norman, the tour's leading money winner for '86, Craig Stadler, and former Spalding champions Al Geiberger and Johnny Miller. Defending champion, Tim Norris, will be attempting to become the third two-time winner of what has become the new golf year's "unofficial" opener.

The Spalding will be played Dec. 31 through Jan. 3 over three Monterey Peninsula courses — Carmel Valley Ranch, Pebble Beach Golf Links, and Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club located at Quail Lodge, which will serve as the tournament headquarters for the first time. The increased purse of $250,000 will offer the winner $50,000 in the only tournament played in the world today that matches top stars from both the Mens and Ladies Tours against each other in competition for the same purse.

Among the Ladies Tour stars challenging the outstanding field of men will be Juli Inkster, Patty Sheehan, Women's Open Champion Jane Geddes, Jan Stephenson, Mary Beth Zimmerman and Val Skinner.

As in past years, the Monterey Kiwanis Club and their youth-oriented programs will again benefit from gallery ticket sales as the official charity of the Spalding.

Advanced season tickets are available at a cost of $20 until Dec. 15, at which time the cost goes to $30. If purchased on an individual, daily basis, the cost would be $50. For information, call the Spalding office at (408) 484-2151 or write the Spalding Pro-Am, P.O. Box M, Carmel, CA 93921.

AT THE CHERRY FOUNDATION

By Linda Coppens

'IT IS A beautiful book, of beautiful and sensitive and sustained poems," wrote Robinson Jeffers to Jeanne D'Orge in 1955. His praise was for her book, Voice in the Circle, just published that year. As many of you already know, D'Orge wrote poetry long before she began to paint. While living in the East, she was one of the "others," a group of poets (including Marianne Moore and Wallace Stevens) experimenting with new forms of verse. As early as 1915 D'Orge was published in Poetry, Scribner's Magazine and Others: A Magazine of New Verse.

Voice in the Circle was a huge success, cited as one of the year's best books by the Saturday Review of Literature's annual poll. D'Orge's friend William Carlos Williams nominated the volume. "I have named your book," he explained in a letter to her, "as a unique example of poems from the female viewpoint, poems of outstanding and disarming technical skill." Other praise came from many sources.

San Francisco critic John Allen wrote, "There is more of Point Lobos in the muted beauty of her opening verses than in a hundred thundering stanzas...Miss D'Orge is good. I'm already in search of her earlier poems."

Her friend and neighbor Edward Weston effused, "the book and its contents is superb...it will remain one of my most cherished possessions." And Jeffers emphasized, "I like best the Point Lobos sequence, as rock and ocean are more beautiful than any human soul. But it is all really one poem — let me congratulate you."

Friends of Photography presents Baer retrospective

A RETROSPECTIVE exhibition by Monterey Peninsula photographer Morley Baer will open in The Friends of Photography Gallery on Friday, Dec. 12 and continue through Jan. 25. There will be an opening preview and reception for the artist from 8 to 10 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 12. Admission is free.

Morley Baer has been a well-known figure in West Coast photography for many years. He has exhibited his work frequently and has been an active teacher of workshops for The Friends, as well as for other organizations. He is scheduled to be on the faculty of The Friends' Ansel Adams Workshop in August of 1987. In addition to two portfolios of fine prints, he has published a number of books, including The Wilder Shore (1984), Room and Time Enough (1980), Painted Ladies (1978) and Adobes in the Sun (1973).

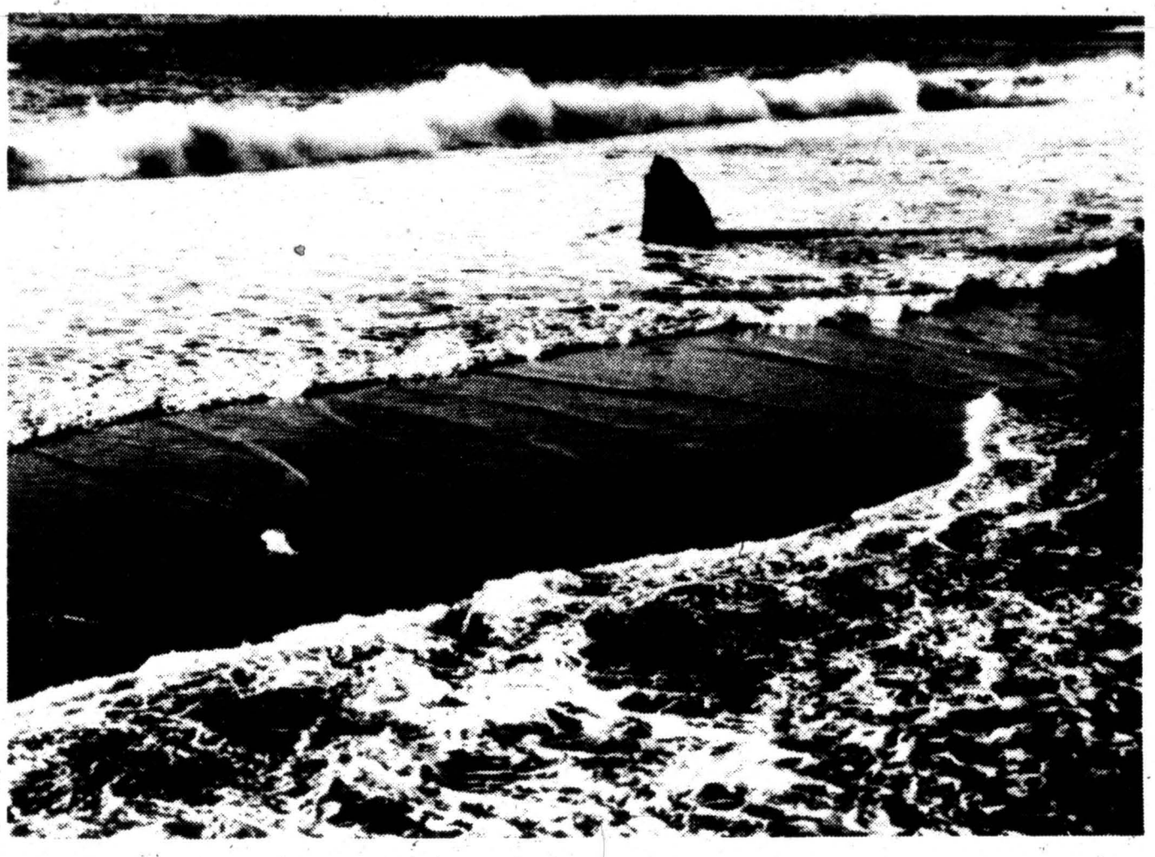
Over the past four decades, Baer has acquired international recognition for the architectural photography he has done commercially, yet he has sustained an intense involvement with his personal artwork. In the same manner, much of his commercial work has been done in color, but he has found in black and white photography the kind of abstraction that best matches his creative vision. While he has photographed for extended periods in both Italy and Spain, as well as in the American Southwest, the greater part of his oeuvre has grown from his strong attachment to the landscape of California. It is this sense of place — portrayed in photographs from locations such as Big Sur and the Central California Coast, Garrapata Beach, the eastern Sierra Nevada and Owens Valley — that is the subject of the exhibition at The Friends Gallery.

Born in Toledo, Ohio, in 1916, Morley Baer began an apprenticeship in commercial photography in Chicago in 1939, following graduation from the University of Michigan with a master's degree in English. During World War II, he served as a photographic officer for the U.S. Navy, first in the Atlantic theater and later as a member of Edward Steichen's photographic team documenting the war in the Pacific.

Baer moved to California in 1946, and in 1947 he met Edward Weston, whose photographs he had seen and been influenced by some eight years earlier in Chicago. He formed a close friendship with Weston as well as with other San Francisco and Carmel-area photographers, such as Ansel Adams and Brett Weston. These professional associations have continued, but it is the legacy brought to California photograhy by Group f/64 that has affected his work to a greater degree. One refelction of Baer's aesthetic roots is his dedication to using an 8x10 view camera and his preference for the unique image quality than can be achieved in a contact print. Although he has made 16x20-inch enlargements in recent years, he does so in full awareness of the compromises made. Both contact prints and enlargements are included in A California Retrospective.

What attracted Baer on his first visit to the West Coast in 1939 was the variety of the landscape's physical properties. These had an impact that established for him a particular way of thinking about the land. After nearly forty years of photographing within the state, Baer has come to see California not as a single coherent location, but as a collection of intimate and subtle places. He does not intend his photographs of a section of coastline, for example, to act as a metaphor for the entire Pacific edge of California, but as an expression of his experience with a beach. This pursuit of a personal landscape is perhaps best seen in his photographs made at Garrapata Beach, south of Carmel, where he lived and worked for more than a decade.

For more information call 624-6330.



DOUBLE SURF, Garrapata Beach, a 1966 silver print by Morley Baer, is from the collection of his images to be featured at the Friends of Photography Gallery in Carmel. "Morley Baer: A California Retrospective" opens with an 8 to 10 p.m. reception Friday, Dec. 12.

Pacific Grove Art Center debuts new exhibitions

THE PACIFIC GROVE Art Center will debut new exhibits of works by members of the Monterey Peninsula Foundation of the Arts as well as photographs by Christine Moran.

Most of the members of the Monterey Peninsula Foundation of the Arts are professional artists, but this is not a necessary qualification. This foundation was organized under a charter in September 1980 as being non-profit and for the public benefit. The expressed purpose is to further the arts through workshops, funding lectures, arranging seminars, and, of course, raise funds to do these things. There are at present 58 members.

The first seminar was given by Winfred Viet at the Pacific Grove Art Center. He is German, is a sculptor, and now makes his home in Lyon, France. He taught a technique which enables the artist to cast portrait heads in plastic. The first lecturer to appear under the auspices of the foundation was Nathan Olivera who spoke in the Samuel Morse Auditorium at the Monterey Institute of International Studies. Another workshop offered to the public by the foundation was a two day seminar at the Pacific Grove Art Center under the tutelage of Joseph Mugnaini who, until his retirement, was head of the department of drawing at the Otis Art Institute.

The lastest activity of the Monterey Peninsula Foundation of the Arts for the public benefit will be supplying the paint for a mural at the Carmel Middle School in Carmel Valley. The execution of this project will be supervised by Dick Crispo who, in a sense, is the founding father.

THE CENTRAL CONCEPT expressed in Christine Moran's photographs is a cultural statement: the prevailing way numerous women are taught to be women in our 20th century American society.

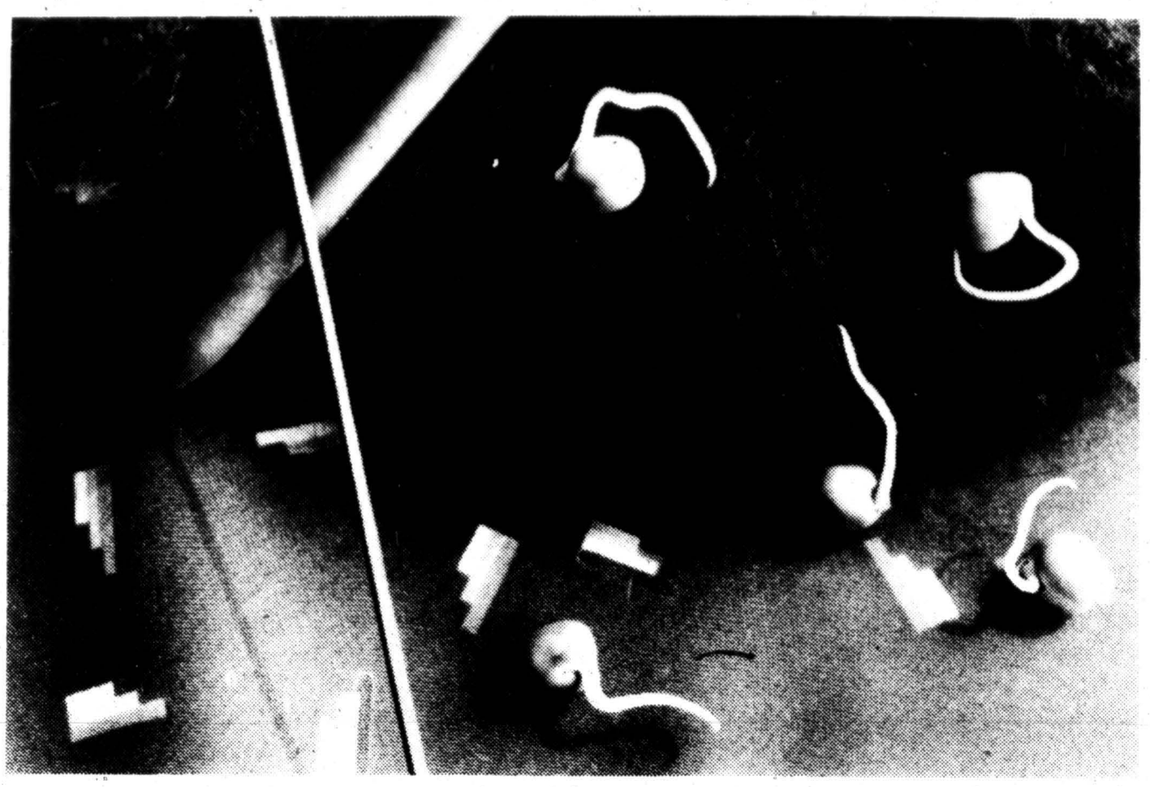
These images are constructed rather than taken in the world as it appears. The objects and the colors have been chosen and assembled to speak of certain realties that occur in the world but are not always seen or acknowledged. The discrete parts in the photographs may be neutral or loaded in meaning.

Christine Moran received her B.F.A. from the San Francisco Art Institute in 1980, concentrating in photography and supplementing her studies with classes in ceramic sculpture, block printing and filmmaking.

The teachers in her major included Jerry Burchard, Linda Connor, Jack Fulton, Oliver Gagliani and Henry Wessel, Jr. From each she learned different technical skills, as well as editing abilities, which contribute to developing intentional imagery and to presenting a cohesive body of work. To further develop her color knowledge, she took a Dye Transfer Workshop from Harry Bowers at the University of California Extension, San Francisco.

During her formal photographic education and subsequently, Moran has gained expertise in the use of the following cameras and film formats: standard view camera and pinhole 4x5; twin lens reflex and plastic camera 2 1/4x size; 35mm; and regular and pinhole 126mm. She works in color, black and white and black and white infrared.

Currently, Moran teaches photography classes at the Rhode Island School of Design, Providence, Rhode Island.



THE PHOTOGRAPHS of Christine Moran will be exhibited at the Pacific Grove Art Center, 568 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove. Her original prints are in color. Admission to the center is free.

PUBLIC NOTICE

CITY COUNCIL
CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
ORDINANCE NO. 86-22

An ordinance establishing water reserve goals and procedures for establishing and maintaining compliance with those goals.

WHEREAS, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District has adopted a long term water allocation plan which limits the water resources available to the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea to 5.542% of the amount chosen by the Water Management District to be used by the jurisdictions within its boundaries; and

WHEREAS, this allocation creates a total supply of 1030.8 acre-feet of water per year for Carmel-by-the-Sea; and

WHEREAS, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea has asked in past years for an adjustment in the water allocation and is currently asking for an adjustment in the water allocation; and

WHEREAS, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea initiated legal action against the Water Management District in order to obtain additional water resources; and

WHEREAS, the use of the water within the City has been steadily increasing since the drought of 1975 through 1977, and for the most recent twelve-month period the City consumed more than 98% of its total water allocation; and

WHEREAS, the City's management of water supplies as established in Ordinances 84-2 and 85-1, provide for the creation of a water reserve to be achieved through the implementation of conservation measures; and

WHEREAS, without such a reserve, the City is vulnerable to periodic fluctuations in water consumption from changes in the local weather and economic conditions; and

WHEREAS, the use of conserved water for new development, as authorized by City ordinances, has the potential to preclude the maintenance of a verifiable water reserve and exposes the City to a potential development moratorium imposed by the District; and

WHEREAS, the Water Management District has proposed the suspension of permit processing for the extension and expansion of water systems serving the City for an indefinite period; and

WHEREAS, this proposed action would prohibit the development and improvement of property within the City to the detriment of the planning and zoning goals, policies and ordinances of the City and in contravention of statewide planning goals favoring infill and residential development within each region; and

WHEREAS, the City has the responsibility under the Constitution and Statutes of the State of California to plan and guide its own development in a manner that reflects local conditions, yet is sensitive to the regional impacts of local actions; and

WHEREAS, the City recognized the unique, regional responsibilities of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District but finds that the management of the City's water resources can best be attained through local actions that are fully consistent with local planning goals, objectives, policies and ordinances and which do not result in the suspension of local autonomy in land use matters,

NOW, THEREFORE, the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, does ordain as follows:

Section One: The follwing section shall be added to Chapter Eight of Title 17 of the Municipal code:

17.08.080 Reserve Established.

The City shall establish and maintain a water reserve. This reserve is established to assure that periodic and uncontrollable fluctuations in water use will not result in the City exceeding its water allocation.

A. The reserve shall be attained by reducing water consumption within the City through conservation programs according to the following schedule:

Water Reserve Goals

Date	Conservation Increment	Water Reserve Total	Total Allowable Consumption
July 1-1986	2%	2%	98%
July 1-1987	2%	4%	96%
July 1-1988	2%	6%	94%
July 1-1989	2%	8%	92%
July 1-1990	2%	10%	90%

B. Calculation of Running Twelve-Month Water Consumption.

Compliance with the reserve goals established in subsection A shall be determined on a monthly basis and shall be based on the water consumption records provided to the City by the California-American Water Company. Upon recept of each month's report of metered sales, a calculation shall be made by adding the total metered consumption for each of the immediately preceding eleven months to the consumption indicated for the current month.

C. Compliance.

At the end of any three consecutive month period wherein the twelve month water consumption total calculated in subsection B has consistently remained below the total allowable consumption established for that fiscal year in subsection A, the City shall have achieved compliance with the reserve goals established by this ordinance.

D. Effect of Compliance.

Upon establishing or re-establishing compliance with the water reserve goals set fourth in subsection A, the City shall send notice by certified mail to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. Ten working days after transmittal of this notice, the City may resume issuing permits and licenses in conformance with Section 17.08.060 and the water allocations established therein.

E. Effect of Non-compliance.

Upon determining that the City has failed to achieve compliance with the water reserve goals established in subsection A herein-above, no building permit, business license, use permit or other entitlement authorizing any project as defined in subsection C of Secton 17.08.060 shall be issued by the Department of Community Planning and Building and Planning Commission.

For the purposes of implementing this section, the following actions shall not be defined as projects:

a. Design Study approvals or building permits authorizing single family residential construction on existing developed building sites when the construction involves no increase in the number of plumbing fixture units as defined by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District on the property and when the water conservation affect of retrofitting all plumbing fixtures on the property to meet the standards established in Chapter 15.28 are achieved.

b. Commercial Design approvals, commercial use permit approvals, business license approvals and bulding permits authorizing minor commercial remodeling involving no increase in building floor area, commercial shop spaces, or dwelling units and involving no increase in land use intensity when all plumbing fixtures on the property are retrofitted to meet the standards established in Chapter 15.28. Measures of land use intensity shall include, but shall not be limited to, increased employees within a shop space, increased hours of operation, and increased business activity wherein employees or patrons could be expected to use additional water.

c. Lot line adjustments not resulting in the creation of additional building sites.

Applicants for projects requesting approval under one of these provisions must provide indisputable evidence of satisfaction with these provisions prior to approval of the project.

2. Immediately upon determining a state of noncomliance, the Director of Community Planning and Building shall notify the City Council, the City Building Official, the City Administrator and the Water Management District. The Director shall forward a report to the City Council to be considered at the next regular or special meeting concerning the change in the status of the City's water consumption. Upon receiving this report and verifying the status of noncompliance, the Council shall adopt a resolution confirming the Director's action.

F. Periodic Review

The City Council shall review the status of water consumption, water conservation and other matters related to water use within the City at lease bimonthly during periods when the authority to issue permits has been suspended by action by Section 17.08.080 (E.)

G. Termination

Section 17.08.080 and all subsections of this section hsall terminate and have no further force or effect upon the effective date of any ordinance of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District that eliminates the allocation of District Water resources to separate municipal jurisdictions and provides unrestricted access to water permits within the limitations of District Water resources.

Section Two. VIOLATIONS. Any person, firm or corporation, whether acting as principal or agent, employee or otherwise violating or causing or permitting the violation of the provisions of this ordinance, is guilty of an infraction. Any bulding erected or any use established contrary to the provisions of this ordinance is hereby declared to be unlawful and a public nuisance and the City Attorney shall, upon order of the City Council, immediately commence action for the abatement or removal thereof.

Section Three. SEVERABILITY. If any part of this ordinance is found to be unenforceable, such finding shall not affect the enforceability of any other part.

Section Four. EFFECTIVE DATE. This ordinance is hereby declared to be an urgency ordinance as set fourth in Section 95858 of the planning and zoning statutes of the California Government Code. Any pending projects that have not received a building permit shall not be approved unless they comply with the terms of this ordinance.

In conformance with Section 65858 of the California Government Code, this ordinance shall be valid for a period of one (1) year after adoption and public hearing.
